TWO AKRON THEATERS WRECKED BY DYNAMITE

AKRON, O., Nov. 26.—Dynamite bombs exploded in two movie theaters here today causing partial destruction to the buildings and resulting in a damage estimated at more than $45,000, according to police.

The movie houses, the Spicer Theater and the Peoples' Theater, were bombed almost simultaneously, police stated.

The bomb in the Peoples' theater had been placed in the outer lobby and completely demolished the front of the building.

The rear section of the Spicer Theater caved in when a bomb was thrown on the roof of the building. The blasts awakened many of the sleeping residents in the city. Police reserves and all available fire department equipment were rushed to the scenes of the explosions.

No one was injured in either of the blasts, police reported. The watchman at the Peoples' Theater was in the washroom of that building when the explosion took place. He was thrown to the floor by the impact but was uninjured.

A police drag-net to locate the bomb "planters" was thrown out immediately by police.

FARM LEADERS MOVE FAVORABLY ON PLAN STABILIZING WHEAT

Oppose Debenture Plan;
Promised Senate
Support

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Advocating postponement of the debenture form of farm relief for a year at least, the farm leaders of America today stood on record as unanimously approving the administration program for stabilizing farm prices through the federal farm board's purchase of surplus wheat.

The action of national farm leaders in supporting the farm board's program brought private assurance from members of the senate agriculture committee they would endorse any appropriation asked by Chairman Alexander Legge to continue the buying operations. This was the principal outcome of the two-day conference between government authorities, farm leaders and the committee.

It was learned that the director of the budget will recommend an additional appropriation of $150,000,000 for the farm board. Congressional leaders were of the opinion that this fund would be increased by congress to $250,000,000. It was made plain too that the farm board does not contemplate selling surplus wheat abroad in any so-called dumping operation. The board, it was added, will be careful not to invite any retaliatory measures from foreign nations.

Legge indicated a reluctance to increase wheat prices above 76 cents-a-bushel when he rather argued against an increase in the tariff on wheat, which would permit the board to stabilize the price at about $1.00.

Legge felt the surplus crop of 1929 and 1930 could be sold more easily at 76 cents than at $1.00. At the lower figure, he said, many farmers would feed their wheat to livestock, leaving the presumption that at the higher figure they would hold it for sale.

The principal recommendations of the farm leaders, in which L. J. Tabor, master of the National Grange, S. H. Thompson of the American Farm Federation, and C. E. Huff of the Farmers' Union, joined, were:

Postponement of action on the debenture for one year at least.

Ban on short-sales of grain, except legitimate hedging.

Appropriation of any fund asked by Legge.

SABINA BANK WILL OPEN DECEMBER 1

SABINA, O., Nov. 26.—The Sabina Bank here will be reopened December 1 with a capitalization of $50,000, after being closed since last July 1 because of frozen assets and heavy withdrawals, according to the state banking department.

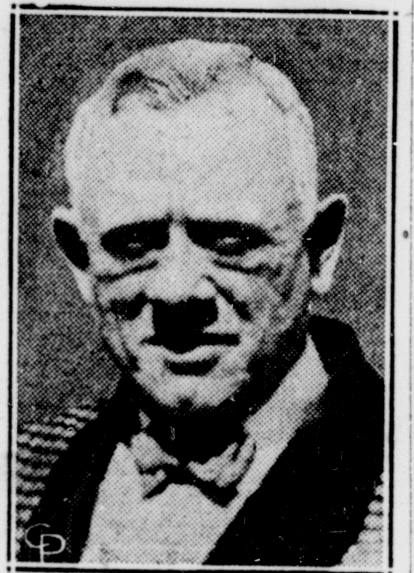

The bank has been reorganized with all the new capital now paid in. Depositors waived 20 per cent of their deposits in order to effect the reorganization.

George Gray and C. C. Bernard were candidates for president of the institution and Raymond Cline was the only aspirant for cashier.

DEMOCRATS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO G. O. P. FARM LEGISLATION

Agree To Help In Farm, Employment Measures

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—In line with their pledge to cooperate with the administration in relieving agricultural distress and unemployment, Democratic congressional leaders today agreed to join the Republicans in enacting a definite program.

The program on which the Democrats will co-operate with the administration, included:

- 1.—Appropriation of any fund requested by the federal farm board for its stabilization policy.
- 2.—Enactment of the administration's $50,000,000 feed, seed, fertilizer and gasoline loan bill.
- 3.—Appropriation of a large fund for road construction in the states, with or without local contributions.
- 4.—Legislation to speed work on public buildings already authorized and possibly, authorization of new construction work.

At one conference, Senator Robinson, Democratic leader of the senate, met with Rep. Byrns of Tennessee, chairman of Democratic congressional committee, Senator Tydings of Maryland, chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee, Senator Swanson of Virginia, Senator Walsh of Montana, assistant senate leader, and Bernard Baruch, New York Democratic leader.

At this conference, it was agreed the leaders would support the administration on all agricultural and unemployment relief legislation. The leaders however announced that this pledge of cooperation could not be construed as either an endorsement of or a compliance with the administration's policies. The Democrats reserved the right to propose their own remedies and to demand enactment of other legislation. The Democrats generally believe the Norris "lame duck" amendment to the constitution should be adopted and that the Norris bill for government operation of Muscle Shoals should be passed. Some Democratic leaders feel the debenture form of farm relief must be passed too before agriculture can be permanently stabilized.

CONVICT SLAYER

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 26.—A verdict of guilty of manslaughter today faced Richard Brewer, of Middletown, who was charged with first-degree murder for the slaying of Patrolman Dan Sandlin of the Middletown police force.

It was the second trial for Brewer, who was charged with fatally wounding the officer when he was being searched for liquor a year ago.

SOCIETY LEADER IS KILLED IN ROBBERY OF CHICAGO TAVERN

Safe Yields $125; Gun
Stock Clew To Killers

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Five masked bandits invaded the fashionable Lake Avenue Tavern today and during the course of their robbery shot and killed Edwin Russell Thompson, multimillionaire traction magnate.

Young Thompson, a leader in society circles here, was slow to obey the commands of the gang and laughed when the leader ordered him to turn around.

Enraged, the gunman fired a sawed-off shotgun point blank at Thompson's chest. Paying no further attention to the prostrate broker, the gang remained for ten minutes, forcing Frank Engle, the proprietor, to open the safe which yielded only $125. Several patrons were relieved of their valuables.

Thompson, whose wife is at Evanston hospital awaiting the birth of their first child, had gone to the tavern to while away a nervous hour or two in a chat with the proprietor, a friend of his. Mrs. Thompson was not told of the tragedy.

The victim's father hurried to the scene and organized a hunt for the slayers in conjunction with the Glenview police.

Examination of Thompson's body revealed that the left breast was filled with slugs.

After the bandits fled, highway police found the stock of a shotgun on the tavern floor. Officers declared that there were fingerprints on it, and it is to be carefully examined in the hope that it will lead to some definite clues.

Police believe the bandits were part of the crew of eight young gunmen who killed three women and wounded three men in a hold-up gun battle at Henry Goetz' roadhouse in Summit, suburb, Sunday morning.

BANDIT SLAIN BY POLICEMAN

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 26.—An unidentified bandit was shot and killed today by Patrolman Charles Harold when he refused to heed the officer's command to halt as he fled across a field on the west side here.

Police said they believed the man was responsible for several holdups and robberies of filling stations in the district.

He was taken to a local hospital where he died less than an hour later.

His identity was being traced through several pawn tickets, a Y. M. C. A. check tag and a key ring.

Patrolman Harold and an assistant, Blueford Malone, had trailed the robber for nearly an hour before the shooting.

GERMANY PROTESTS SILESIAN RIOTS

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The German government today dispatched to the League of Nations a note of protest against alleged persecution of the German minority in upper Silesia during the recent Polish elections.

The protest was sent following receipt of reports from German representatives in Poland alleging cruelties perpetrated upon German residents to influence their voting.

MAL DAUGHERTY RE-INDICTED FOR MISAPPLYING BANK FUNDS

WASHINGTON, C. H., Nov. 26.—Mal S. Daugherty, former president of the now defunct Ohio State Bank here today was under a re-indictment on fifty-two counts in fourteen indictments which charge him with misapplication of funds of the bank and false entry.

The Fayette County grand jury yesterday re-indicted the former bank head and warrants for his arrest were expected to be issued today by Prosecutor W. S. Paxson.

The grand jury also re-indicted Virgil Vincent, who was originally indicted on a charge of perjury. He filed a plea in abatement.

Daugherty was at liberty under bond of $40,000, pending a hearing on the original indictments. "Prosecutor Paxson said that when the pleas in abatement were filed by Daugherty, he made an attempt to have them tried at the same time but that Daugherty's at-

DAYTON DENTIST IS AUTO CRASH VICTIM

DAYTON, O., Nov. 26.—One man was killed and two were injured early today when their automobile skidded on the highway and overturned several miles east of here.

Dr. Elmer S. Guthrie, 41, well-known Dayton dentist, was killed instantly.

E. T. Grant, of New York, driver of the car, who was injured in the crash, wandered from the scene of the accident. A search was started for him. Authorities traced his footprints in the snow for nearly a mile.

The other man injured was M. H. Hardy, of Dayton. He was believed not seriously hurt.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The East and West must unite and work together or the "happiness of mankind will not be realized."

That was the plea of Sir Rabin-drath Tagore, India's poet and educator, here last night when he was welcomed to America by 200 leaders in America's cultural and industrial life.

SOVIET DISCONTENT ACUTE; STALIN SECURE

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Discontent among the people of Soviet Russia is becoming increasingly acute, but the possibility of Josef Stalin being overthrown is "remote," it was stated in dispatches from Moscow received in authoritative quarters here today.

While reports of recent disturbances in Soviet Russia were characterized as "greatly exaggerated," the dispatches stressed the dissension which is growing as a result of Stalin's efforts to speed up industrial and agricultural production through out the country in an attempt to catch up with the requirements of the "five year plan."

The dissension is not confined to the people alone, the dispatches declared, but also is making itself felt in high Soviet government circles. The right faction of Stalin's cabinet is becoming more powerful and is voicing with more vigor its opposition to the drastic acceleration which has been ordered to meet the "five year plan" figures.

Little credence, however, was given to talk of Stalin's immediate overthrow.

Southwestern Ohio Police Seeking Notorious Gang

DAYTON, O., Nov. 26.—Belief was expressed here today by authorities of Dayton and Montgomery County that the notorious bank bandit gang headed by Robert Zwick, reputed Ohio gang leader and gunman, executed the daring robbery of the Gratis State Bank at Gratis, Preble County yesterday.

Local officials were aiding in the state-wide search for the bandits' automobile, a large black sedan bearing no license plates, which is believed to have belonged to the Zwick gang.

It was said that the car was the same which has been used in a number of recent bank robberies in southwestern Ohio which have been attributed to Zwick and his terrorizing band of gunmen.

Authorities said they believed no other gang in Ohio could have staged the robbery in the manner similar to the bravado operations of Zwick and his companions.

It was reported that the reputed gang leader has been making his headquarters at Newport, Ky., and that he invades Ohio at intervals to carry on his daring wave of crime.

Officials of Preble, Butler and Hamilton Counties, who are conducting the search for the bandits, reiterated the statement of local authorities that the notorious Zwick gang had executed the robbery.

EATON, O., Nov. 26.—While the little village of Gratis recovered today from the terrorizing effects of one of the most sensational bank robberies in the annals of Ohio, renewed efforts were made by sheriffs, deputies and police of southern Ohio to apprehend the sextet of bandits that executed the daring robbery.

The six armed bandits held the town's 355 residents at bay for nearly two hours yesterday while they entered Gratis State Bank and looted the safe of its entire contents consisting of $5,000 in currency and nearly $9,000 in securities.

Six separate charges of nitroglycerin were used in blowing the bank's vault.

When Mrs. William Guntle, night telephone operator of the town, was awakened by the first blast, the bandits cut all telephone and telegraph wires into the town to prevent communication. Mrs. Guntle and her family live in an apartment on the second floor of the bank building.

BANK ROBBED OF $29,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Four masked bandits held up four employees and a woman patron in the Peoples Bank at Hawthorne, N. J., today and escaped with $29,000. They made their getaway in a car driven by a fifth man.

The bandits fled with their loot after Mrs. Thomas Statham, the patron, rushed from the bank.

CLEVELAND CHEST DRIVE PASSES GOAL

CLEVELAND, Nov. 26.—This city today was prepared to handle its problem of poor relief during the winter, following a successful community fund drive which netted a total of $5,418,524.41 in pledges.

Both the goal for the regular fund of $4,650,000, and the emergency fund of $750,000, were over-subscribed in the campaign which ended last night.

The junior chest drive in the public schools of the city has been making great strides within the last two days. Tuesday afternoon 407 pupils contributed $17.46 and Wednesday morning 233 more school children donated $9.42. So far a total of 1,295 pupils have contributed $61.16, according to reports received from all the school buildings.

East High School pupils contributed 100 per cent to the drive, going over the top in their drive Wednesday morning. Miss Jane Hayward's eighth grade class at McKinley grade building is also in the 100 per cent class.

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE SLOW; FUND STILL FAR SHORT OF GOAL

The Xenia Community Chest fund is mounting steadily day by day but the progress being made is too slow to suit chest workers.

Tuesday's report disclosed that only $330 had been added to the fund during the day and contributions made to date during the first four days of campaigning total only $2,343.69, whereas it is necessary to obtain $10,000 to support the city's charitable and character-building agencies next year.

As one of the encouraging features, however, of the drive, chest leaders point out that workers report Xenians are apparently contributing more generously than a year ago. Cards are coming in so slowly, however, chest leaders are convinced a large number of workers have not submitted reports.

A voluntary contribution of $30 received from Mrs. W. J. Cherry, Federal Pike, was disclosed Wednesday as an example that interest in the current campaign is not limited to Xenia. Mrs. Cherry resides outside the restricted solicitation area.

"The campaign is making reasonable progress," Chairman T. H. Zell declared Wednesday, "but we are still far from our goal and the resources to attain it, while certainly existent, are not in sight. There is but one way in which it can be reached. That is by the most vigorous and unremitting work in all divisions from now on. Of the working classes those who have employment are giving with a spirit of sacrifice and devotion which has never been equalled in this city and which commands our highest admiration."

"If the salaried people and others of large means will give upon an equal scale, the goal is secure. Up to this point the evidence is not in our hands that they have done so."

Some of Governor Cooper's advisers, it became known today, are recommending that, in view of Director Waid's announcement, no special legislative session be called.

Under this bill, prohibition crimes would be divided into petty offenses and felonies. The Jones law now provides a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine for a first violation of the law. The Stobbs bill provides that minor violations, such as sale or transportation of but one quart of liquor, would draw a maximum penalty of six months imprisonment and $500 fine.

The so-called "juriless trial" bill, passed by the house last session, remains in the senate judiciary committee.

Senator Sheppard (D) of Texas, dry leader in the senate, already has announced he will press for its passage along with other bills of the Wickersham commission.

Under this measure, lesser offenders would be tried before U. S. commissioners without jury and sentenced by federal judges. Provision is made, however, for trial by jury if demanded by the accused after the commissioner's action.

PENINSULA STRUCK BY SEVERE TREMBLOR AND BY LANDSLIDES

Winter Playground Is Wrecked; Palace Is Damaged

TOKIO, Nov. 26.—Levelling hundreds of homes and buildings in Japan's "winter playground," a disastrous earthquake today struck the beautiful Izu peninsula, killing at least 200 people and injuring scores.

Landslides which followed in the wake of the temblor, described as the worst since the cataclysm of 1923, disrupted communication and transportation facilities, preventing a complete check-up of the casualties.

Mountain and seacoast towns on the picturesque peninsula, a favorite resort for native Japanese and tourists alike, suffered heavily by the earthquake which severely damaged an area of more than 600 miles. The quake was felt in Tokyo, Yokohama and other large cities, but material damage was slight and there were no casualties.

The towns hardest hit were Nara-yama, Mishima, Munadzu, Nagakura and Atami. Hundreds of flimsy homes collapsed with the heaving of the earth, burying their occupants in the ruins. The temblor lasted for thirteen seconds, but the landslides which followed it wrought new havoc through the early hours of the morning.

Relief forces were mobilized immediately to aid the injured and care for homeless survivors.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—An official announcement from Tokyo reported a death toll of more than 220 persons in the earthquake which rocked Izu Peninsula of Japan, according to London evening newspapers.

Shizuoka Prefecture listed 187 fatalities; Nagakura reported considerable damage in addition to twenty dead and many injured and five were killed by the quake at Atami. The imperial palace at Miy-anoshita was badly damaged.

Mishima and vicinity sustained the worst property damage, according to the Tokyo announcement. Fires broke out in the wake of the temblor in many of the affected districts.

PROHIBITION WILL TAKE LIMELIGHT IN CONGRESS SESSION

Amendment To Jones
Law To Be Pushed By Wet Bloc

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Prohibition legislation and the Wickersham law enforcement commission will spring into the limelight immediately after the opening of congress next week regardless of whether the commission makes its long-awaited report.

The original Wickersham commission program to improve dry law enforcement, including the so-called "juriless trial" bill and amendment of the Jones "live and let" law, will take the center of the liquor legislation stage.

A drive will be started for final action on the Stobbs bill amending the Jones law, although it was designed for passage only as a part of a general program recommended by the Wickersham commission.

The statement of Senator Feas (R) of Ohio, and other leading dries that the Jones law may be too severe has encouraged the wets to plan the new fight.

The Stobbs bill has now passed both senate and house, but because of minor amendments by the senate, the house must act again in the coming short session.

Under this bill, prohibition crimes would be divided into petty offenses and felonies. The Jones law now provides a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine for a first violation of the law. The Stobbs bill provides that minor violations, such as sale or transportation of but one quart of liquor, would draw a maximum penalty of six months imprisonment and $500 fine.

EAST MEETS WEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The East and West must unite and work together or the "happiness of mankind will not be realized."

That was the plea of Sir Rabin-drath Tagore, India's poet and educator, here last night when he was welcomed to America by 200 leaders in America's cultural and industrial life.

SOVIET DISCONTENT ACUTE; STALIN SECURE

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Discontent among the people of Soviet Russia is becoming increasingly acute, but the possibility of Josef Stalin being overthrown is "remote," it was stated in dispatches from Moscow received in authoritative quarters here today.

While reports of recent disturbances in Soviet Russia were characterized as "greatly exaggerated" the dispatches stressed the dissonance which is growing as a result of Stalin's efforts to speed up industrial and agricultural production through out the country in an attempt to catch up with the requirements of the "five year plan."

Southwestern Ohio Police Seeking Notorious Gang

DAYTON, O., Nov. 26.—Belief was expressed here today by authorities of Dayton and Montgomery County that the notorious bank bandit gang headed by Robert Zwick, reputed Ohio gang leader and gunman, executed the daring robbery of the Gratis State Bank at Gratis, Preble County yesterday.

Local officials were aiding in the state-wide search for the bandits' automobile, a large black sedan bearing no license plates, which is believed to have belonged to the Zwick gang.

It was said that the car was the same which has been used in a number of recent bank robberies in southwestern Ohio which have been attributed to Zwick and his terrorizing band of gunmen.

Authorities said they believed no other gang in Ohio could have staged the robbery in the manner similar to the bravado operations of Zwick and his companions.

It was reported that the reputed gang leader has been making his headquarters at Newport, Ky., and that he invades Ohio at intervals to carry on his daring wave of crime.

Officials of Preble, Butler and Hamilton Counties, who are conducting the search for the bandits, reiterated the statement of local authorities that the notorious Zwick gang had executed the robbery.

EATON, O., Nov. 26.—While the little village of Gratis recovered today from the terrorizing effects of one of the most sensational bank robberies in the annals of Ohio, renewed efforts were made by sheriffs, deputies and police of southern Ohio to apprehend the sextet of bandits that executed the daring robbery.

The six armed bandits held the town's 365 residents at bay for nearly two hours yesterday while they entered Gratis State Bank and looted the safe of its entire contents consisting of $5,000 in currency and nearly $9,000 in securities.

Six separate charges of nitroglycerin were used in blowing the bank's vault.

When Mrs. William Guntle, night telephone operator of the town, was awakened by the first blast, the bandits cut all telephone and telegraph wires into the town to prevent communication. Mrs. Guntle and her family live in an apartment on the second floor of the bank building.

BANK ROBBED OF $29,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Four masked bandits held up four employees and a woman patron in the Peoples Bank at Hawthorne, N. J., today and escaped with $29,000. They made their getaway in a car driven by a fifth man.

The bandits fled with their loot after Mrs. Thomas Statham, the patron, rushed from the bank.

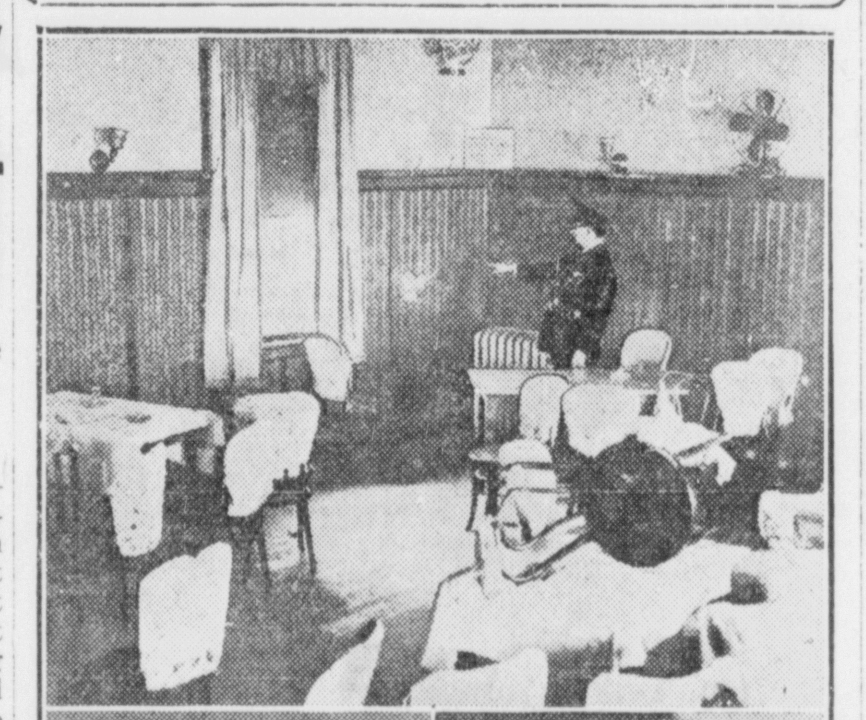

CLEVELAND CHEST DRIVE PASSES GOAL

CLEVELAND, Nov. 26.—This city today was prepared to handle its problem of poor relief during the winter, following a successful community fund drive which netted a total of $5,418,524.41 in pledges.

Both the goal for the regular fund of $4,650,000, and the emergency fund of $750,000, were over-subscribed in the campaign which ended last night.

The junior chest drive in the public schools of the city has been making great strides within the last two days. Tuesday afternoon 407 pupils contributed $17.46 and Wednesday morning 233 more school children donated $9.42. So far a total of 1,295 pupils have contributed $61.16, according to reports received from the schools.

GIRLS KILLED IN BANDITS' RAID

In this room in a roadhouse at Summit, Ill., Alice Ward, left, and Mary Brining, right, entertainers, were shot to death when eight young bandits, panic-stricken when the lights were suddenly turned out during a hold-up, fired into a corner where fifteen men and seven women were huddled together. One other woman is said to be dying and three of the men were seriously injured. The bandits fled following the shooting.

COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE SLOW; FUND STILL FAR SHORT OF GOAL

The Xenia Community Chest fund is mounting steadily day by day but the progress being made is too slow to suit chest workers.

Tuesday's report disclosed that only $330 had been added to the fund during the day and contributions made to date during the first four days of campaigning total only $2,343.69, whereas it is necessary to obtain $10,000 to support the city's charitable and character-building agencies next year.

As one of the encouraging features, however, of the drive, chest leaders point out that workers reported Xenians are apparently contributing more generously than a year ago. Cards are coming in so slowly, however, chest leaders are convinced a large number of workers have not submitted reports.

A voluntary contribution of $50 received from Mrs. W. J. Cherry, Federal Pike, was disclosed Wednesday as an example that interest in the current campaign is not limited to Xenia. Mrs. Cherry resides outside the restricted solicitation area.

"The campaign is making reasonable progress," Chairman T. H. Zell declared Wednesday, "but we are still far from our goal and the resources to attain it, while certainly existent, are not in sight. There is but one way in which it can be reached. That is by the most vigorous and unremitting work in all divisions from now on. Of the working classes those who have employment are giving with a spirit of sacrifice and devotion which has never been equaled in this city and which commands our highest admiration."

"If the salaried people and others of large means will give upon an equal scale, the goal is secure. Up to this point the evidence is not in our hands that they have done so."

Some of Governor Cooper's advisers, it became known today, are recommending that, in view of Director Waid's announcement, no special legislative session be called.

The prediction that no special legislative session will be held this year was based upon the announcement, made by Highway Director Robert N. Waid a few days ago, that there was practically $500,000 in the state highway maintenance fund—enough money to permit employment of about 5,500 workers on the state's highways for the remainder of this year.

Some of Governor Cooper's advisers, it became known today, are recommending that, in view of Director Waid's announcement, no special legislative session be called.

COXEY STILL TRIES

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—General Jacob S. Coxey, who led a famous unemployment march on Washington in 1894, was to hold a meeting today to plan for another march on the capital. The general had a meeting scheduled yesterday but he was the only one who showed up.

PENINSULA STRUCK BY SEVERE TEMBLOR AND BY LANDSLIDES

Winter Playground Is Wrecked; Palace Is Damaged

TOKIO, Nov. 26.—Levelling hundreds of homes and buildings in Japan's "winter playground," a disastrous earthquake today struck the beautiful Izu peninsula, killing at least 200 people and injuring scores.

Landslides which followed in the wake of the temblor, described as the worst since the cataclysm of 1923, disrupted communication and transportation facilities, preventing a complete check-up of the casualties.

Mountain and seacoast towns on the picturesque peninsula, a favorite resort for native Japanese and tourists alike, suffered heavily by the earthquake which severely damaged an area of more than 600 miles. The quake was felt in Tokyo, Yokohama and other large cities, but material damage was slight and there were no casualties. The towns hardest hit were Nayarama, Mithima, Munadu, Nagoka and Atami. Hundreds of flimsy homes collapsed with the heaving of the earth, burying their occupants in the ruins. The temblor lasted for thirteen seconds, but the landslides which followed it wrought new havoc through the early hours of the morning.

Relief forces were mobilized immediately to add the injured and care for homeless survivors.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—An official announcement from Tokyo reported a death toll of more than 220 persons in the earthquake which rocked Izu Peninsula of Japan, according to London evening newspapers.

Shizuoka Prefecture listed 187 fatalities; Nagoka reported considerable damage in addition to twenty dead and many injured, and five were killed by the quake at Atami. The imperial palace at Miy-anohita was badly damaged.

Mishima and vicinity sustained the worst property damage, according to the Tokyo announcement. Fires broke out in the wake of the temblor in many of the affected districts.

PROHIBITION WILL TAKE LIMELIGHT IN CONGRESS SESSION

Amendment To Jones Law To Be Pushed By Wet Bloc

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Prohibition legislation and the Wickersham law enforcement commission will spring into the limelight immediately after the opening of congress next week regardless of whether the commission makes its long-awaited report.

The original Wickersham commission report, including the so-called "juryless trial" bill and amendment of the Jones "five and ten" law, will take the center of the liquor legislation stage.

A drive will be started for final action on the Stobbs bill amending the Jones law, although it was designed for passage only as a part of a general program recommended by the Wickersham commission.

The statement of Senator Fess (R) of Ohio, and other leading dries that the Jones law may be too severe has encouraged the wets to plan the new fight.

The Stobbs bill has now passed both senate and house, but because of minor amendments by the senate, the house must act again in the coming short session.

Under this bill, prohibition crimes would be divided into petty offenses and felonies. The Jones law now provides a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine for a first violation of the law. The Stobbs bill provides that minor violations, such as sale or transportation of but one quart of liquor, would draw a maximum penalty of six months imprisonment and $500 fine.

The so-called "juryless trial" bill, passed by the house last session, remains in the senate judiciary committee.

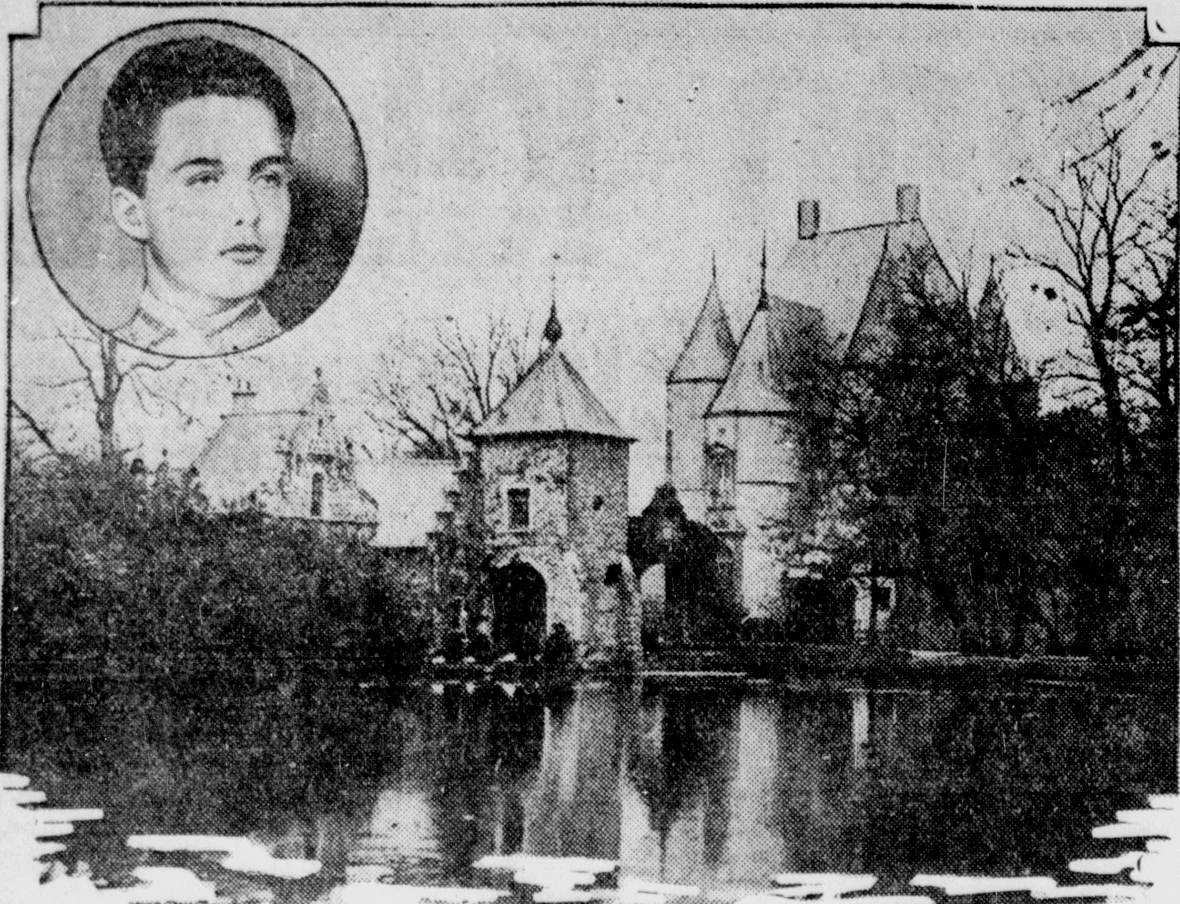

Senator Sheppard (D) of Texas, dry leader in the senate, already has announced he will press for its passage along with other bills of the Wickersham commission.

Under this measure, lesser offenders would be tried before U. S. commissioners without jury and sentenced by federal judges. Provision is made, however, for trial by jury if demanded by the accused after the commissioner's action.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Treasury statement as of Nov. 24: Treasury balance, $97,873,045.50. Expenditures, $8,068,922.25. Customs receipts, $30,345,465.95.

Thanksgiving Day Heavy Dinner Custom Changes

Thanksgiving Day is here again with its traditional turkey dinner with all the trimmings but when we pause to think of the Thanksgiving feasts prepared by our grandmothers years ago as compared with the holiday dinner of the present generation we can see that a vast change has taken place.

It has always been a custom in American homes for more time and trouble to be taken in the preparation of the Thanksgiving dinner than that of Christmas, for at Yuletide there is so much excitement and "hubbub" that one does not think of eating. But at Thanksgiving time, more so several years ago than now, there is nothing so exciting happening.

Grandma would spend days in the kitchen making plum puddings, pies and other delicacies in preparation for the Thanksgiving feast. Then on the day when the family was to come home she would get up before daybreak to put the turkey into the oven and start to prepare other times on the dinner's menu. Not so today. In the first place people do not care for such heavy meals and in the second place there are so many more modern conveniences that it is not necessary to waste so much time in preparing the dinner.

True today, especially so with the feminine population, the Thanksgiving dinners of long ago added calorie upon calorie to the diet so that is just another reason for the change that has taken place. Then today, we do not want to tarry long at the dinner table for maybe there is a football game in the afternoon or an interesting "talkie" to occupy our attention.

So the change has come about, but being honest with yourselves, didn't you really enjoy those Thanksgiving dinners that were the custom of not so many years ago?

GUILD PRODUCTION OF "HAY FEVER" NOT TO BE "SNEEZED" AT

If you don't believe that the Xenia Little Theater Guild is an altogether worthwhile group (of course everyone does so we are giving no offense) just go to see "Hay Fever" and analyze just what made the audience, including yourself, writhe with merriment on the floor of the Opera House Tuesday night.

Of course, you won't be able to have another chance to see this hilarious comedy, first because the audience is restricted to Guild members, and second because the play, will not be repeated. The audience, we must also confess, managed to keep in the seats, but you have the word of a disinterested observer that it must have been accomplished only by an effort. Aply presented by Guild members who were peculiarly well suited to their respective parts, the production was a riot of rich comedy. It was nothing short of legendarily for an amateur cast.

The members carried the piece (Carried it? They bounced it all over the place) and with the crackling Noel Coward lines, the production left you after two hours like something run through a wringer. It was very exhaustive humor, but the hangover was slight and the fun was worth it. What impressed us most of all was the air of casual human conversation which the performers managed to invest in their lines. It came under the head of expert character delineation and reflected the influence of Miss Eleanor Klerman, who directed the play. Miss Klerman certainly saw to it that the cast members knew their lines backward and forward. There was no faltering over what next to say or do and we have nothing but unstinted praise for both Miss Klerman and the ten members who had parts in the comedy.

This play, by the way, ushered in the third season for the Guild and the organization could hardly have selected a better vehicle

SENTENCED TWICE, MAN ALSO MAY HAVE GUARDIAN NAMED

Troubles do not come singly for Charles A. Hurley, 70, Bellbrook. Hurley was recently fined $50 and costs for intoxication by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, who committed him to the County Jail in default of payment.

Thursday Hurley was brought before Judge Wright a second time to answer a new affidavit charging possession of liquor. He pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs. As soon as he is freed from jail he will be transferred to the Dayton Workhouse to work out the heavier assessment.

Not only that but Hurley's son-in-law, C. D. Barnard, Sugar Creek Twp., appeared in Probate Court and filed an application seeking to have a guardian appointed for his father-in-law on the ground he is a habitual drunkard and incapable of providing for his wife and taking care of his property. His property consists of personal goods valued at $1,500, a seventy-eight acre farm and one-half interest in forty-two acres of farming land, both tracts situated on the Bellbrook and Ferry Road and jointly valued at $5,000.

The application will be considered by Judge Wright at a hearing December 3.

GEORGIA MARBLE IS AGAIN SUSTAINED

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 26.—Action of the state office building commission in the selection of Georgia marble for use in the construction of the new state office building here was upheld in the decision today of the fourth Ohio district court of appeals sitting in Franklin County.

The action follows the approval by the Franklin County common pleas court in its refusal to grant an injunction to Thomas H. Dent, of Columbus, who sought to restrain the building commission from using the marble.

Dent based his objection on the legislative action of the Ohio general assembly which provided for appropriation of funds for the building and specified that Ohio material be used wherever possible.

than the one decided upon. The air pockets were few and far between. There was only one drawback, and this was slight. The characters were prone at first to speak indistinctly, a common fault and a deficiency which was overcome after the opening act. Otherwise we in our humble way can think of no criticism to offer.

The Guild may consider itself particularly fortunate in the selection of Mrs. Charles Adair for the difficult and important role of "Judith Bliss." As a retired actress wedded to a novelist, (E. Earl Mann), Mrs. Adair portrayed convincingly the part of a mother clinging to her theatrical ways both in manner and speech. Loathful to forget her stage success, she thrives on sympathy and praise and silly intrigues, and her family humors her. Mr. Mann as the husband displayed pronounced ability.

Other members of the family include the daughter, "Sorel Bliss," Miss Betty Montague, and "David Bliss," a son, James Bryson. Miss Montague, also a new member in the Guild plays, is vivacious and has a fine stage presence, while Mr. Bryson was also admirably suited for his part.

The action concerns itself with a week-end party at the Bliss home, every member of the family having invited a guest down for the week-end without consulting each other.

The guests are "Myra Arundel," Mrs. Katherine Farrell; "Jackie" Coryton, Miss Mary Louise Smith; "Richard Greatham," Isadore Hyman; and "Sandy" Tyrell, Archer Maxwell.

Mrs. Farrell carried her part with her usual poise. Miss Smith, also making her debut, evidenced capabilities. Mr. Hyman was well cast in the role of a polished gentleman and Mr. Maxwell was too funny for words. It is a gift with him, Mrs. Jessie Bryson, as "Clara," employed at the Bliss home, must not be overlooked in passing around praise. She was supposed to be quaint and she certainly was.

Musical for the production was furnished by Xenia's new civic orchestra of fourteen pieces. The orchestra is a new venture and is being made possible by subscriptions of music lovers of Xenia. Under the direction of Harold E.

Seall the orchestra contributed largely to an evening of agreeable entertainment. Before the curtain went up and between acts selections from "The Student Prince," "Pomp and Circumstance," and "My Maryland" were played. Xenia musicians assisting in the orchestra included Marcus Shoup and A. B. Kester, violins; Miss Juanita Rankin, piano, and Roger Pagett, trumpet.—Philip Frame.

than the one decided upon. The air pockets were few and far between. There was only one drawback, and this was slight. The characters were prone at first to speak indistinctly, a common fault and a deficiency which was overcome after the opening act. Otherwise we in our humble way can think of no criticism to offer.

The Guild may consider itself particularly fortunate in the selection of Mrs. Charles Adair for the difficult and important role of "Judith Bliss." As a retired actress wedded to a novelist, (E. Earl Mann), Mrs. Adair portrayed convincingly the part of a mother clinging to her theatrical ways both in manner and speech. Loathful to forget her stage success, she thrives on sympathy and praise and silly intrigues, and her family humors her. Mr. Mann as the husband displayed pronounced ability.

Other members of the family include the daughter, "Sorel Bliss," Miss Betty Montague, and "David Bliss," a son, James Bryson. Miss Montague, also a newcomer in Guild plays, is vivacious and has a fine stage presence, while Mr. Bryson was also admirably suited for his part.

The action concerns itself with a week-end party at the Bliss home, every member of the family having invited a guest down for the week-end without consulting each other.

The guests are "Myra Arundel," Mrs. Katherine Farrell, "Jackie" Coryton, Miss Mary Louise Smith, "Richard Greatham," Isadore Hyman; and "Sandy" Tyrell, Archer Maxwell.

Mrs. Farrell carried her part with her usual poise. Miss Smith, also making her debut, evidenced capabilities. Mr. Hyman was well cast in the role of a polished gentleman and Mr. Maxwell was too funny for words. It is a gift with him, Mrs. Jessie Bryson, as "Clara," employed at the Bliss home, must not be overlooked in passing around praise. She was supposed to be quaint and sex certainly was.

Music for the production was furnished by Xenia's new elvish orchestra of fourteen pieces. The orchestra is a new venture and is being made possible by subscriptions of music lovers of Xenia. Under the direction of Harold E.

Seal the orchestra contributed largely to an evening of agreeable entertainment. Before the curtain went up and between acts selections from "The Student Prince," "Pomp and Circumstance," and "My Maryland" were played. Xenia musicians assisting in the orchestra included Marcus Shoup and A. B. Kester, violins; Miss Juanita Rankin, piano, and Roger Pagett, trumpet.—Philip Frame.

RETURN OF THE FENCE

The settlers of most of our old towns built fences about their homes. In many rural communities such protection was necessary, as a defense against the cattle that were driven through the streets. European homes usually have high walls or fences today, and many people brought the idea over from those old countries. Some folks like the seclusion of a well fenced home.

About 25 years ago, the majority of American towns began to remove fences from their homes. The sight of green lawns between the houses and the street, with the view unobstructed by any fence or wall, made a neighborhood look like a public park, and people liked it. Also it saved expense for maintaining fences.

Today many people are erecting fences around their properties again. Few of them have to guard their lawns from cattle. But the modern American boy does more damage than any dumb animal. The kids frolic on the lawns on which people with difficulty and labor are trying to raise grass.

The householders may tell them again and again not to cross their land, but they consider it huge fun to disregard such warnings. But a boy will think some time before climbing a fence with sharp wires or points on top. His trousers are his most vulnerable point, and he will so around some distance to avoid tearing them.

If people had been more generous in providing playgrounds for the boys and girls, they might not be so lawless in crossing the lawns. A pretty hedge running across the front of a place is a useful reminder that the land is not quite public property. People are more and more desirous of keeping handsome looking places, and if the kid element persist in trampling down the grass many families will decide that hedges and fences are necessary.

THE CHRISTMAS RUSH

The American people should begin thinking right off about one of their follies that makes trouble in the business world. And that is their mistaken habit of buying and selecting their Christmas gifts in one grand rush, for a period of 10 days or two weeks before the holiday.

The Christmas gift habit is a very beautiful one. It brings happiness to both givers and receivers. It makes a day of ecstasy for the children. But we spoil the custom in part, by making it the occasion of a grand scramble, which causes inconvenience to the general public, and creates intense strain and overwork for a great body of postal and store and other employees.

It is poor business and it is poor humanity. People are terribly inconsiderate to do the thing in this way. There are hundreds of thousands of these store and postal workers in the country, who are driven to the verge of a nervous breakdown every year, as the result of the excessive strain of those two weeks.

Many of them probably have to do three times as much work in the brief period as they do in similar lengths of time during the rest of the year. Human nature is not built to stand it. It must be almost unendurable for a lot of these folks.

Yet it is wholly needless. If people who have any money ahead would start sometime in November to make their purchases, and get them out of the way 10 days before Christmas, the strain would be much better distributed. They could then receive better attention. They would not have to do so much waiting, they would find better selections of goods, they would permit business to be done at less expense, and they would receive enthusiastic applause from a great body of overworked folks.

Beside the lame ducks, there are a lot of other ducks who are still wondering how they escaped being put on crutches.

LET'S SPLIT THE DIFFERENCE

You like poker. I find it dull. I prefer Bridge. You can't see any fun in Bridge at all.

You'd rather play Chess than Bridge or Poker, but think it's too complicated and I tell you stories of men who became so infatuated by the game they couldn't think of anything else and ruined their lives.

I like to spend Saturday afternoons at football games. Football fascinates, makes a bleacher coach of me, leaves me limp. You can't understand now any halfway intelligent man can enjoy football, but YOU go to baseball games and know the batting average of every player in the league.

I eat meat. You're a vegetarian and you look down on me. You eat white bread. Give me whole wheat bread every time. I've eaten snails and enjoyed them. You'd just as soon eat a slug. But you used to eat frog legs before you were a vegetarian and you say they are good. But press ME the fried chicken!

You go to bed at half-past eight or nine. What a sleepy-head you are! You get up early; I don't; what a slugabed I am! So you say.

You're a pessimist. I'm nearly an optimist.

We agree that we both hate war, but you think it's necessary and I don't.

You're a Realist about men and women, perhaps I'm a dreamer.

I have one religion. You have another.

You think Human Nature doesn't change. I'm inclined to believe it does.

You enjoy crowds. I can't say I do.

You like pleasant entertainment in your reading matter. I prefer a dash of irony in mine.

What a lot of things there are in this world to disagree about! But it's not quarrel. Let's be reasonable. You be You and I'll be Me—and we'll try to get along. Why should we fight just because we are different?

We'll split the difference and be friends.

Bo-Broadway

—By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—An East Side baker having heard that modern "efficiency" and "progress" were, for the moment, in the discard and that thousands of his fellow men were in need of bread, took the term "bread" literally and baked 100 loaves of bread.

He loaded them on a truck and one day last week fared forth to put a crimp in famine.

He couldn't get rid of the bread. Nobody wanted it. He visited several bread-lines, naturally supposing that his truck would be mobbed. Instead of mobbing the vehicle, the Hungry Brothers stood off at a distance staring at the Good Samaritan with that lazy collapse that usually attends frustration.

They were hungry, many of them; but they hadn't reached that point in want where they leaped wolfishly at a stray loaf of bread.

At the tail-end of one bread line the baker encountered a Celtic dame with her brood of three clinging to her draperies. The baker tendered his loaves and they were rejected thus:

"What good's bread without butter?"

Standards are precisely what the Gentleman from Sauk Center lacks. He, himself, is part of the disease he attempts to define.

ANOTHER KING ABDICATES!

BETTER CO-OPERATION FROM SOCIAL ANGLE IS URGED FOR FARMER

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON—When Dr. Charles J. Galpin, of the agriculture department urges better co-operation among farmers, he means social co-operation.

Usually it is co-operative marketing that agricultural economists talk about. Dr. Galpin indorses that, too.

However, his particular job is to help the farmer and his family to lead the broadest, fullest—yes, and pleasant—possible lives. In fact, the division of farm population and rural life is the doctor's special niche in the department of agriculture.

The task of the farm population and rural life division is the shaping of country living conditions—making the country, in its way, as desirable a place to inhabit as the big cities.

Some critics argue that Dr. Galpin's plan of accomplishing this end, if adopted by farmers generally, will spell the finish of country life altogether.

The doctor answers that they misunderstand him. Their theory is that he wants farmers to move from their farms and huddle in settlements, with their wives and children, for the sake of community advantages.

"No such thing," says the doctor. "I do want community advantages for farm folk, but without the abandonment of a single farm house."

"A community," continued the veteran economist, "needs adequate numbers to afford worth while advantages, but it no longer needs to be packed into small compass."

"In the old days it did. The rural community of two or three decades ago was limited, as to area, by poor roads and primitive means of transportation. Then 100 families were as many, maybe, as could reach a common center."

"In our own era of concrete highways and automobiles, 10 or 20 or 30 times 100 families can reach that same center in far less time than the original 100 required for the trip in horse-drawn lumber wagons, sometimes wallowing through almost bottomless mud for weeks to get there."

"Now 100 families," went on the doctor, "represent a total population of about 500 and a population of that size, unless it is a very wealthy one, cannot pool sufficient resources to maintain a good school, not to mention other community conveniences."

"But 1,000 families imply a total count," he says, "for the national tolerance of murder which has come with the ascendancy of thug power in the United States. The fact is that the routine activities of gang-killers have long ago beggared in scope and equalled in viciousness any horror ever attributed to any vicious force at any time in history."

"Pirates on the high seas, and American Indians, far from civilization in the pioneer days, have duplicated, but not greatly surpassed the bloodthirstiness of the new caste of American apache who is winning control of our cities by murder."

"The gang-menace operates in the midst of the wealthiest and most progressive nation the world has seen. Nor is there a single factor in that civilization qualified at present to cope with this social and industrial cancer created by the lowest minds and least worthy elements in the community."

of 5,000 people or thereabouts, and 5,000 people, even in moderate circumstances, can support an excellent school—indeed, a high school—and a library and a number of additional conveniences of modern life. There are enough of them to provide electrical lighting and power for the district they inhabit—and fire and police protection—perhaps a water system.

"And, with its automobile, the most remote of these 1,000 families is no farther removed, in point of time, from its community hub, than the average city man requires to get from his house to his place of business in the morning."

"The obstacle in the way of effecting so desirable a readjustment," said the doctor, "lies in the fact that practically the whole United States was divided up into taxation units on a township basis, under old-fashioned 'mud road conditions.'"

"It is mighty hard to get away from this idea, just as it is mighty hard to get away from any outworn idea."

"A degree of progress has been made toward the consolidation of school districts. Otherwise we continue to think in townships, except in one state—North Carolina, where they are beginning to see the light, and have passed a law permitting rural communities, by petition, to re-group themselves according to their actual needs and convenience."

"The sooner the township passes into oblivion the better it will be for the farmer. Presently the county will follow it. That also has lost its usefulness in the present generation."

"You shall live to pay for this with your head!" shrieked the fierce Red Ant, revenge making her eyes glimmer more than ever. But for all her fury, her face could grow no redder than it already was.

"Sticks and stones may hurt my bones, but words will never harm me!" mocked Peter. "I am not a bit sorry for you, and if all the Red Ants are like you, I shall do my level best to give them a taste of my weapon. You are a wicked race, you Red Ants, always seeking some weaker neighbors whose lives you may take, and whose crops you may devour. Insectland would well be rid of you. Say good-bye to this world, for I am going to drop you to the ground, and unless I am much mistaken you will never rise to do any more damage."

"Hey, wait a moment!" Red Ant's plea was hoarse, but Peter paid no attention.

"Dropped you go!" cried he, and dropped the struggling ant from the point of his spear to the ground below. Nor did she rise. She couldn't.

Clever Rules Quoted For Bathing

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The Wilson I mean, when I say "Wilson's eleven points," was not Woodrow, but Erasmus, a famous English skin specialist. He is the man who made the Englishman's ritual of daily bathing a part of the British constitution and a sacrament of the Church of England. He said he hoped the wide sale of his book on the skin had "in some degree contributed to the popularity of soap and water among our countrymen."

Here are his "Essentials of Bathing—"

1. Rub the skin and limbs gently with the hands while in the bath, and, in the swimming bath, swim, that you may combine moderate muscular exercise with the action of the water on the skin.

2. Try to feel when you have had enough; some bear immersion in water longer than others.

3. Never abuse the bath by bathing too long! Your own sensations are a better test than time.

4. Dry the body leisurely, with moderate friction, beginning with the head, then take the arms and body, then the legs and feet.

5. Rough friction to the skin is never necessary, neither in the bath nor out of it.

6. Friction has three purposes, namely: To move the circulation in the skin; to exercise the muscles, and to rub off dirt and loose skin.

7. The cleaning of the skin is very much assisted by soap; soap is tonic to the skin and very wholesome; it removes the old face of the skin and the varnish of dirt that is apt to form upon it.

8. Never dress until the body is perfectly dry, then the clothing should be resumed leisurely, to give the skin time to feel and breathe the air. A great authority on the bath, Mr. George Wither, R. S., finishes a code of rules for the bath with these memorable words: "Finally, the bather should dress deliberately, walk away slowly, and reflect on the blessing that he has enjoyed."

9. If the bather turn faint or sick, it is the consequence of some indiscretion; he should lie flat upon the ground, upon his side, and dry and dress himself slowly as soon as he has recovered.

10. If the bather be in a state of perspiration, he should take a tepid bath before he resorts to the cold bath. And if he be exhausted or fatigued, he may still take a tepid bath—but on no account take a cold bath.

11. The time spent in the bath must be regulated by the sensations of the bather; it may be longer for a tepid bath than for a cold bath. From five to 15 minutes may be enough for the cold bath, from 10 to 20 minutes for the tepid bath. But this time may be prolonged if the bather be engaged in the exercise of swimming.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A new pamphlet, "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," by Dr. Clendening, can be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 E. Be Natural With Future In-Laws

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am expecting to visit my fiancée's parents for a couple of days over Christmas. I haven't met his folks yet, and am in doubt about several things. When I am introduced, what should I say? Should I make comments on her cooking? Who should suggest when to go to bed? What should I say when leaving? What would be a suitable wardrobe? Should I take them a Christmas present? If so, what? I thank you. Puzzled."

First and foremost, be yourself, my dear. Let your future parents-in-law see just what kind of a girl their son has chosen for a wife. When you are introduced say you are so glad to have a chance to meet John's parents. Say it simply and sincerely.

If your hostess's cooking is to your liking, praise it, and tell her you would like to have her recipes, as you want to give your husband the kind of food his mother gave him when he was home and that he always enjoyed.

Your hosts will probably suggest bedtime, or they may considerably go to bed themselves a little early to give you and the boy friend a chance to have a little chat after they have gone. If so, don't abuse the privilege. Talk for awhile and then say you think you had better go to bed as you want to be rested to enjoy the rest of your visit.

When leaving say what would be natural to a hostess under any circumstances, only more affectionately. Say that you have had a lovely time, that it was most kind of them to invite you and you hope you will see them again shortly.

The clothes you take depends largely on the way they live. You probably would wear a simple dress with long coat and matching or harmonizing accessories of hat, shoes, gloves and bag for the journey, whether by train or auto. That dress might be worn in the daytime while you are there, or another something like it substituted. Take one dressy dress in case a party is planned. Probably your fiancée can tell you about what you had better expect in this line—whether the formal dress will be needed or not. A washable morning dress may be tucked in your bag to wear in the morning if you fiancée's mother does her own work, for in that case you would want to help her, of course.

Yes, you should take presents. Ask your boy friend what his people's tastes are, whether his mother prefers personal gifts or something for the house. Pretty pieces of china, glass or silver are always acceptable, as are such things as silk stockings, gloves, scarfs, books, pictures, leather goods, electrical articles, etc. Take as nice a gift for each as you can afford.

Go prepared to like your future in-laws and to do all in your power to make them like you.

Jackie: Sure you didn't encourage the boy you say you don't love—didn't flirt with him even a tiny bit? Even if you did, insist that you love the boy friend, and him only. If he continues to be jealous, burst into tears and tell him that he does not love you or he would trust you. That usually works. Make him feel that he is abusing you by his suspicions. It's an old trick, but valuable.

An Admirer: There are some people so constituted that they cannot comfortably go with this one and that, but must have one true heart to lean on and one only. There are others who never can be true to one alone, they are always flitting from flower to flower. You know which kind of a man makes the better playmate in the long run, don't you?

Now your boy friend evidently is a faithful kind. He likes you and doesn't care a hang for any other girl. He would be miserable with another and can't see why you cannot be contented to go only with him. If you want to keep him, and eventually marry him, I expect you will have to give in and refuse other invitations. If, however, you have no intention of ever being anything but a friend to him, refuse to go "steady," and go out with others. He will then probably decide you're not the one for him, and find another girl when he gets over his hurt. Don't let him go, however, and then feel bad and wonder how you can get him back.

Warm-Clad Body Resists Cold

—By GLADYS GLAD—

The cold, wintry weather always brings with it an avalanche of complaints about "red noses." This condition results from a variety of causes. The red nose is no longer considered the exclusive possession of the drunkard. The red-nosed farmer's daughter may appear to have been making frequent passes at her paw's hand older jug. The crimson-nosed debutante may appear to have had more than a passing interest in the town's leading liquor emporiums. But both girls may possess all the qualifications of a rigid W. C. T. U. member. The veriest teetotaler may acquire a red nose.

The red nose usually is caused either by sluggish circulation or by exposure to cold winds that tend to paralyze the capillaries. It is utterly useless to attempt to conceal the condition beneath a layer of powder. All the powder in a box of powder won't obscure your flaming proboscis. Make-up will not keep the drawn look from the faces of those whose bodies resent the cold.

To correct the condition you must eat plenty of warm, nourishing food. Avoid foods that stimulate the blood supply too much. You must obtain plenty of healthful exercise, to stimulate the circulation. You must wear clothes that are heavy enough to keep off the wind and cold. You don't have to borrow grandfather's red flannels. But you must keep your body warmly clad. Sufficient nourishment, sufficient exercise, sufficient clothing, sufficient rest will give you the resistance that the red-nosed individual usually lacks.

You must observe all the above measures of you wish to look your best during the cold months. Win-

RETURN OF THE FENCE

The settlers of most of our old towns built fences about their homes. In many rural communities such protection was necessary, as a defense against the cattle that were driven through the streets. European homes usually have high walls or fences today, and many people brought the idea over from those old countries. Some folks like the seclusion of a well fenced home.

About 25 years ago, the majority of American towns began to remove fences from their homes. The sight of green lawns between the houses and the street, with the view unobstructed by any fence or wall, made a neighborhood look like a public park, and people liked it. Also it saved expense for maintaining fences.

Today many people are erecting fences around their properties again. Few of them have to guard their lawns from cattle. But the modern American boy does more damage than any dumb animal. The kids frolic on the lawns on which people with difficulty and labor are trying to raise grass.

The householders may tell them again and again not to cross their lawns, but they consider it huge fun to disregard such warnings. But a boy will think some time before climbing a fence with sharp wires or points on top. His trousers are his most vulnerable point, and he will go around some distance to avoid tearing them.

If people had been more generous in providing playgrounds for the boys and girls, they might not be so lawless in crossing the lawns. A pretty hedge running across the front of a place is a useful reminder that the land is not quite public property. People are more and more desirous of keeping handsome looking places, and if the kid element persist in trampling down the grass many families will decide that hedges and fences are necessary.

THE CHRISTMAS RUSH

The American people should begin thinking right off about one of their follies that makes trouble in the business world. And that is their mistaken habit of buying and selecting their Christmas gifts in one grand rush, for a period of 10 days or two weeks before the holiday.

The Christmas gift habit is a very beautiful one. It brings happiness to both givers and receivers. It makes a day of ecstasy for the children. But we spoil the custom in part, by making it the occasion of a grand scramble, which causes inconvenience to the general public, and creates intense strain and overwork for a great body of postal and store and other employees.

It is poor business and it is poor humanity. People are terribly inconsiderate to do the thing in this way. There are hundreds of thousands of these store and postal workers in the country, who are driven to the verge of a nervous breakdown every year, as the result of the excessive strain of those two weeks.

Many of them probably have to do three times as much work in that brief period as they do in similar lengths of time during the rest of the year. Human nature is not built to stand it. It must be almost unendurable for a lot of these folks.

Yet it is wholly needless. If people who have any money ahead would start sometime in November to make their purchases, and get them out of the way 10 days before Christmas, the strain would be much better distributed. They could then receive better attention, they would not have to do so much waiting, they would find better selections of goods, they would permit business to be done at less expense, and they would receive enthusiastic applause from a great body of overworked folks.

Beside the lame ducks, there are a lot of other ducks who are still wondering how they escaped being put on crutches.

LET'S SPLIT THE DIFFERENCE

You like poker. I find it dull. I prefer Bridge. You can't see any fun in Bridge at all.

You'd rather play Chess than Bridge or Poker, but think it's too complicated and I tell you stories of men who became so infatuated with the game they couldn't think of anything else and ruined their lives.

I like to spend Saturday afternoons at football games. Football fascinates, makes a bleacher coach of me, leaves me limp. You can't understand now any halfway intelligent man can enjoy football, but YOU go to baseball games and know the batting average of every player in the league.

I eat meat. You're a vegetarian and you look down on me. You eat white bread. Give me whole wheat bread every time. I've eaten snails and enjoyed them. You'd just as soon eat a slug. But you used to eat frog legs before you were a vegetarian and you say they are good. But press ME the fried chicken!

You go to bed at half-past eight or nine. What a sleepy-head you are! You get up early; I don't; what a slugabed I am! So you say. You're a pessimist. I'm nearly an optimist.

We agree that we both hate war, but you think it's necessary and I don't. You're a Realist about men and women, perhaps I'm a dreamer. I have one religion. You have another.

You think Human Nature doesn't change. I'm inclined to believe it does.

You enjoy crowds. I can't say I do.

You like pleasant entertainment in your reading matter. I prefer a dash of irony in mine.

What a lot of things there are in this world to disagree about! But it's not quarrel. Let's be reasonable. You be You and I'll be Me—and we'll try to get along. Why should we fight just because we are different? We'll split the difference and be friends.

Bo-Broadway

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—An East Side baker having heard that modern "efficiency" and "progress" were, for the moment, in the discard and that thousands of his fellow men were in need of bread, took the term "bread" literally and baked I-don't-know-how-many loaves, loaded them on a truck and one day last week fared forth to put a crime in famine.

He couldn't get rid of the bread. Nobody wanted it. He visited several bread-lines, naturally supposing that his truck would be mobbed. Instead of mobbing the vehicle, the Hungry Brothers stood off at a distance staring at the Good Samaritan with that lazy collapse that usually attends frustration.

They were hungry, many of them; but they hadn't reached that point in want where they leaped wolfishly at a stray loaf of bread.

At the tail-end of one bread line the baker encountered a Celtic dame with her brood of three clinging to her draperies. The baker tendered his loaves and they were rejected thus:

"What good's bread wiout butter?"

Old "Red" Lewis, the Litter Photographer of Sauk Center, Minn., has been awarded the Nobel Prize for literature.

No matter what they say about Lewis's stuff in this day of standardized mediocrity, it's nothing but tawdry clever.

It would be decidedly helpful if someone would show us Main Street and Mister Babbitt, on a background of standards.

Standards are precisely what the Gentleman from Sauk Center lacks. He, himself, is part of the disease he attempts to cure.

ANOTHER KING ABDICATES!

BETTER CO-OPERATION FROM SOCIAL ANGLE IS URGED FOR FARMER

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—When Dr. Charles J. Galpin, of the agricultural department urges better co-operation among farmers, he means social co-operation.

Usually it is co-operative marketing that agricultural economists talk about. Dr. Galpin indorses that, too.

However, his particular job is to help the farmer and his family to lead the broadest, fullest, yes, and pleasantest—possible lives. In fact, the division of farm population and rural life is the doctor's special niche in the department of agriculture.

The task of the farm population and rural life division is the shaping of country living conditions—making the country, in its way, as desirable a place to inhabit as the big cities.

Some critics argue that Dr. Galpin's plan of accomplishing this end, if adopted by farmers generally, will spell the finish of country life altogether.

The doctor answers that they misunderstand him. Their theory is that he wants farmers to move in from their farms and huddle in settlements, with their wives and children, for the sake of community advantages.

"No such thing," says the doctor. "I do want community advantages for farm folk, but without the abandonment of a single farm house."

"A community," continued the veteran economist, "needs adequate numbers to afford worth while advantages, but it no longer needs to be packed into small compass."

In the old days it did. The rural community of two or three decades ago was limited, as to area, by poor roads and primitive means of transportation. Then 100 families were as many, maybe, as could reach a common center.

In our own era of concrete highways and automobiles, 10 or 20 or 30 times 100 families can reach that same center in far less time than the original 100 required for the trip in horse-drawn lumber wagons, sometimes wallowing through almost bottomless mud for weeks to get there.

"Now 100 families," went on the doctor, "represent a total population of about 500 and a population of that size, unless it is a very wealthy one, cannot pool sufficient resources to maintain a good school, not to mention other community conveniences."

"But 1,000 families imply a total count," he says, "for the national tolerance of murder which has come with the ascendancy of thug power in the United States. The fact is that the routine activities of gang-killing here have long ago beguiled in scope and equalled in viciousness any horror ever attributed to any vicious force at any time in history."

"Pirates on the high seas, and American Indians, far from civilization in the pioneer days, have duplicated, but not greatly surpassed the bloodthirstiness of the new caste of American apache who is winning control of our cities by murder."

"The gang-menace operates in the midst of the wealthiest and most progressive nation the world has seen. Nor is there a single factor in that civilization qualified at present to cope with this social and industrial cancer created by the lowest minds and least worthy elements in the community."

of 5,000 people or thereabouts, and 5,000 people, even in moderate circumstances, can support an excellent school—indeed, a high school—and a library and a number of additional conveniences of modern life. There are enough of them to provide electrical lighting and power for the district they inhabit—perhaps a water system.

"And, with its automobile, the most remote of these 1,000 families is no farther removed, in point of time, from its community hub, than the average city man requires to get from his house to his place of business in the morning."

"The obstacle in the way of effecting so desirable a readjustment," said the doctor, "lies in the fact that practically the whole United States was divided up into taxation units on a township basis, under old-fashioned mud road conditions."

"It is mighty hard to get away from this idea, just as it is mighty hard to get away from any outworn idea."

"A degree of progress has been made toward the consolidation of school districts. Otherwise we continue to think in townships, except in one state—North Carolina, where they are beginning to see the light, and have passed a law permitting rural communities, by petition, to re-group themselves according to their actual needs and convenience."

The sooner the township passes into oblivion the better it will be for the farmer. Presently the county will follow it. That also has lost its usefulness in the present generation."

How about our really "vast open spaces"—of which we still have some? They involve distances that would hustle even a racing auto to get the children into town in time to greet the school bell in the morning.

"Oh, the Great American Desert can wait awhile," agreed the doctor.

And the densely-settled districts around our big cities—half rural, half urban?

"They present a problem all right," said Dr. Galpin, "but it's a suburban problem; it isn't agricultural. Consequently it isn't up to me to find the answer to it, and I'm glad of it, for it's rather difficult."

MENU HINT

Celery Soup Crackers
Casserole of Lamb Creamed Onions
Cabbage Salad
Apricot Coconut Pudding
Tea or Coffee

This menu will serve four. Make the celery soup of the outer, tougher stalks, leaving the hearts to serve raw at the table.

Today's Recipes

Casserole of Lamb.—Two and one-half pounds loin of lamb, one-half cup rice, two cups water, one blade mace, one-half cup fat, two eggs yolks, salt and pepper, a little grated nutmeg. Half roast loin of lamb, and cut it into steaks. Boil rice in boiling salted water for ten minutes, drain it and add to it gravy with nutmeg and mace; cook slowly until rice begins to thicken, remove it from fire, stir in fat and when melted add yolks of eggs well beaten. Grease a casserole well, sprinkle steaks with salt and pepper, dip them in melted fat and lay them in dish; pour over gravy that comes from them, add rice and simmer for one-half hour.

Apricot Coconut Pudding.—Two cups hot milk, one cup soft stale bread crumbs, one-fourth cup sugar, one-eighth teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup stewed dried apricots, one cup coconut. Pour hot milk over bread crumbs, sugar and salt. Cut stewed apricots sweetened to taste in quarters. Add apricots to milk and bread mixture with well beaten eggs, lemon rind and three-fourths cup coconut. Turn into a greased baking dish, place in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven 325 degrees Fahrenheit, 45 to 60 minutes or until pudding is firm. After the pudding has baked 30 minutes sprinkle the remaining coconut over the top. Return to oven to brown and serve with cream.

Suggestions

Ways of Serving Dried Fruit
Cooked prunes with orange sections make a delightful winter shortcake when served with whipped cream.

Cooked prunes served with the roast of pork lend color and piquancy to the roast.

Prune pulp folded in whipped cream or added to the plain chocolate russe gives a more festive dish than when served plain.

Raisins and almonds added to the orange or grapefruit salad make a savory combination.

Dried peaches stewed with figs have a richer flavor than when cooked alone.

Clever Rules Quoted For Bathing

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The Wilson I mean, when I say "Wilson's eleven points," was not Woodrow, but Erasmus, a famous English skin specialist. He is the man who made the Englishman's ritual of daily bathing a part of the British constitution and a sacrament of the Church of England. He said he hoped the wide sale of his book on the skin had "in some degree contributed to the popularity of soap and water among our countrymen."

Here are his "Essentials of Bathing."

1. Rub the skin and limbs gently with the hands while in the bath, and in the swimming bath, swim, that you may combine moderate muscular exercise with the action of the water on the skin.
2. Try to feel when you have had enough; some can bear immersion in water longer than others.
3. Never abuse the bath by bathing too long; your own sensations are a better test than time.
4. Dry the body leisurely with moderate friction, beginning with the head, then take the arms and body, then the legs and feet.
5. Rough friction to the skin is never necessary, neither in the bath nor out of it.
6. Friction has three purposes, namely: To move the circulation in the skin; to exercise the muscles, and to rub off dirt and loose skin.
7. The cleaning of the skin is very much assisted by soap; soap is tonic to the skin and very wholesome; it removes the old face of the skin and the varnish of dirt that is apt to form upon it.
8. Never dress until the body is perfectly dry, then the clothing should be resumed leisurely, to give the skin time to feel and breathe the air. A great authority on the bath, Mr. George Witt, F. R. S., finishes a code of rules for the bath with these memorable words: "Finally, the bather should dress deliberately, walk away slowly, and reflect on the blessing that he has enjoyed."

9. If the bather turn faint or sick, it is the consequence of some indiscretion; he should lie flat upon the ground, upon his side, and dry and dress himself slowly as soon as he has recovered.

10. If the bather be in a state of perspiration, he should take a tepid bath before he resorts to the cold bath. And if he be exhausted or fatigued, he may still take a tepid bath—but on no account take a cold bath.

11. The time spent in the bath must be regulated by the sensations of the bather; it may be longer for a tepid bath than for a cold bath. From five to 15 minutes may be enough for the cold bath, from 10 to 20 minutes for the tepid bath. But this time may be prolonged if the bather be engaged in the exercise of swimming.

Be Natural With Future In-Laws

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am expecting to visit my fiancée's parents for a couple of days over Christmas. I haven't met his folks yet, and am in doubt about several things. When I am introduced, what should I say? Should I make comments on her cooking? Who should suggest when to go to bed? What should I say when leaving? What would be a suitable wardrobe? Should I take them a Christmas present? If so, what? I think you. Puzzled."

First and foremost, be yourself, my dear. Let your future parents-in-law see just what kind of a girl their son has chosen for a wife. When you are introduced say you are so glad to have a chance to meet John's parents. Say it simply and sincerely.

If your hostess's cooking is to your liking, praise it, and tell her you would like to have her recipes, as you want to give your husband the kind of food his mother gave him when he was home and that he always enjoyed.

Your hosts will probably suggest bedtime, or they may considerably go to bed themselves a little early to give you and the boy friend a chance to have a little chat after they have gone. If so, don't abuse the privilege. Talk for awhile and then say you think you had better go to bed as you want to be rested to enjoy the rest of your visit.

When leaving say what would be natural to a hostess under any circumstances, only more affectionately. Say that you have had a lovely time, that it was most kind of them to invite you and you hope you will see them again shortly.

The clothes you take depends largely on the way they live. You probably would wear a simple dress with long coat and matching or harmonizing accessories of hat, shoes, gloves and bag for the journey, whether by train or auto. That you might be worn in the daytime while you are there, or another something like it substituted. Take one dressy dress in case a party is planned. Probably your fiancée can tell you about what you had better expect in this line—whether a formal dress will be needed or not. A washable morning dress may be tucked in your bag to wear in the morning if your fiancée's mother does her own work, for in that case you would want to help her, of course.

Yes, you should take presents. Ask your boy friend what his people's tastes are, whether his mother prefers personal gifts or something for the house. Pretty pieces of china, glass or silver are always acceptable, as are such things as silk stockings, gloves, scarfs, books, pictures, leather goods, electrical articles, etc. Take as nice a gift for each as you can afford.

Be prepared to like your future in-laws and to do all in your power to make them like you.

Jackie: Sure you didn't encourage the boy you say you don't love—didn't flirt with him even a tiny bit? Even if you did, insist that you love the boy friend, and him only. If he continues to be jealous, burst into tears and tell him that he does not love you or he would trust you. That usually works. Make him feel that he is abusing you by his suspicions. It's an old trick, but valuable.

An Admirer: There are some people so constituted that they cannot comfortably go with this one and that, but must have one true heart to lean on and one only. There are others who never can be true to one alone. They are always flitting from flower to flower. You know which kind of a man makes the better playmate in the long run, don't you?

Now your boy friend evidently is a faithful kind. He likes you and doesn't care a hang for any other girl. He would be miserable with another and can't see why you cannot be contented to go only with him. If you want to keep him, and eventually marry him, I expect you will have to give in and refuse other invitations. If, however, you have no intention of ever being anything but a friend to him, refuse to go "steady," and go out with others. He will then probably decide you're not the one for him, and find another girl when he gets over his hurt. Don't let him go, however, and then feel bad and wonder how you can get him back.

Warm-Clad Body Resists Cold

By GLADYS GLAD

The cold, wintry weather always brings with it an avalanche of complaints about "red noses." This condition results from a variety of causes. The red nose is no longer considered the exclusive possession of the drunkard. The red-nosed farmer's daughter may appear to have been making frequent passes at her paw's hard cider jug. The crimson-nosed debutant may appear to have had more than a passing interest in the town's leading liquor emporiums. But both girls may possess all the qualifications of a rigid W. C. T. U. member. The veriest tee-totaler may acquire a red nose.

The red nose usually is caused either by sluggish circulation or by exposure to cold winds that it is utterly useless to attempt to conceal the condition beneath a layer of powder. All the powder in a box of powder won't obscure your flaming proboscis. Make-up will not keep the drawn look from the faces of those whose bodies resent the cold.

To correct the condition you must eat plenty of warm, nourishing food. Avoid foods that stimulate the blood supply too much. You must obtain plenty of healthful exercise, to stimulate the circulation. You must wear clothes that are heavy enough to keep off the wind and cold. You don't have to borrow grandfather's flannel. But you must keep your body warmly clad. Sufficient nourishment, sufficient exercise, sufficient clothing, sufficient rest will give you the resistance that the red-nosed individual usually lacks.

You must observe all the above measures of you wish to look your best during the cold months. Winter weather should be exhilarating and stimulating. The girl who can swing along in the cold, brisk mornings with evident enjoyment of the tang of the cold air, presents a most pleasing picture. But if you are undernourished and underclad, if you allow your circulation to become sluggish, the cold will reduce you to a shivering, scarlet-nosed picture of misery.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Pimples

Greta: Simplify your diet. Live on fruits and vegetables. Drink eight to ten glasses of water a day. Eat bran, agar, spinach, carrots, figs, dates, oranges and onions to sweep your intestines clean of poisons.

Camomile Tea Rinse

Marie: The camomile tea rinse is used to enhance the color of light hair. Boil a handful of camomile flower in a pint of water. Strain the mixture, and add a little enough water to form a quart. Then use the solution as a rinse after you shampoo your hair.

Standard Weight

R. M. C. and A Reader: I think that a girl 17 years of age and 5 feet 9 inches tall should weigh about 140 pounds. A girl 16 years of age and 5 feet 7-7-1/2 inches tall should weigh about 132 pounds.

Eight Buccaneers Will Sing Grid Swan Song

SENIORS CONCLUDE FOOTBALL CAREERS THURSDAY MORNING

Springfield Tilt Is Last Of Season For Central

Eight seniors on Xenia Central High's football team will don grid togs for the last time Thursday morning when the Buccaneer grid-ders close their current season in the annual Thanksgiving Day contest with Springfield High at Cox Field. The kickoff will be at 10 o'clock.

Seniors who will play their last game are Sherman Huston, guard; Marvin Spahr, guard; Charles Adair, halfback; Robert Kinsey, tackle and fullback; Birch Bell, quarterback; Paul McClellan, center, Lester Price, end; and Charles Shoemaker, guard.

Those who are leaving will be dimitted to replace. They have been a credit to Xenia Central and to the school. Bell has been one of the leading offensive threats for the Bucs for the last four years while Adair has seen active service for two seasons.

Huston, Spahr, Kinsey and McClellan—the four linemen—have been the bulwarks of the forward wall this season, sacrificing personal glory for teamwork. Spahr is closing his third season as a regular. This has been Huston's first season. Kinsey, converted from a tackle into a fullback in mid-season when Howard Thompson dislocated his shoulder in the Withrow game, has been a particularly handy boy to have around. McClellan has been the regular center most of the season, while Price developed surprisingly this fall into a fine punter.

Spahr, Price, Bell and Kinsey have played in every quarter of every game so far this season, an amazing record.

Then you must not overlook Charles Shoemaker, also a senior and a guard, who has been a member of the squad for the last three seasons although not earning a regular berth. He will probably see a good bit of action against the Wildcats as will all other seniors.

Regardless of the outcome of the Springfield tilt the Buccaneer squad this season has been a fine group to work with, Coach Wilson declares. Its fighting ability, most of the time against odds, has made it respected by all opponents and admired by all. Playing through a difficult schedule the Bucs have never let up. Their team spirit has been wonderful and they will strive to make a good showing in the season's finale Thursday morning.

Twenty-two Springfield players will also trot the gridiron for the last time Thanksgiving Day. Wildcat players who will make their final appearance include: Shingle-decker, Moss, Neer, Corie, Campbell, Hall, Duffy, Alloway, Ferguson, Kramer, Gordon, Claus, Gosling, Collins, Nisley, Priest, McEneaney, Doughman, Kissell, Epprecht, Caywood and Pullen.

Springfield has won seven and lost two games to date. The Wildcats lost to Dayton Stivers, 8 to 0 and Middletown, 13 to 0, but have defeated Gallon, 14 to 0; Columbus, 40 to 0; Troy, 62 to 0; Hamilton, 14 to 7; Cincinnati Withrow, 27 to 0; Lima South, 19 to 0, and also Marion Harding by a huge count last Saturday.

Wilberforce University's football team will come to the end of its long trail Thursday afternoon in the annual Thanksgiving Day struggle with West Virginia State College at Wilberforce. The game will start at 2 p. m.

This Mid-West grid classic may decide not only the football championship of the Middle-West, this season but may also have an important bearing on the national title.

Defeated only once this season—by Pisk University—Wilberforce has one of the best if not the best defensive records of any college team in the entire country—white or colored. The Wilberforce goal line has been crossed only twice.

Quarterback Thornhill ranks thirteenth among the high point scorers in Ohio college circles with forty-three points and Moore is also well up among the leaders.

The list of unbeaten and untied major college football teams has been reduced to four this season. Alabama, Utah, Washington State and Notre Dame remain in this select class, each having won eight straight games except Utah, which has seven consecutive victories to its credit. Southern California, which has amassed 350 points, is the high scoring team of the country. Only seven points have been scored against Marquette, which has by far the best defensive record.

Southern California, which has amassed 350 points, is the high scoring team of the country. Only seven points have been scored against Marquette, which has by far the best defensive record.

Defeated only once this season—by Pisk University—Wilberforce has one of the best if not the best defensive records of any college team in the entire country—white or colored. The Wilberforce goal line has been crossed only twice.

Quarterback Thornhill ranks thirteenth among the high point scorers in Ohio college circles with forty-three points and Moore is also well up among the leaders.

The list of unbeaten and untied major college football teams has been reduced to four this season. Alabama, Utah, Washington State and Notre Dame remain in this select class, each having won eight straight games except Utah, which has seven consecutive victories to its credit. WILBERFORCE SET FOR TURKEY DAY GAME WITH WEST VIRGINIA

Light signal drills and limbering-up exercises have been in order for the Wilberforce football team this week, and on the eve of the battle with West Virginia State the Buckeye camp is pervaded by an air of optimism which is contagious.

Coach Harry Graves sent the squad through a stiff scrimmage last Saturday, holding a light scrimmage Monday for the purpose of making a final try-out of opposing plays. He expressed gratification over the showing made by the team but would voice no opinion as to the outcome of Thursday's game. "The squad is in fine shape and I expect the boys to give all they have," was all the Buckeye mentor had to say.

The West Virginia team is scheduled to arrive late Wednesday afternoon, with a host of supporters following on Thursday morning. The team will be quartered on the University campus and will in all probability be given a light workout Thursday morning. West Virginia was defeated Saturday by Clark University of Atlanta, Ga., a team which bowed to Wilberforce by a 20-0 score. Wilberforce also defeated Bluefield, the team which upset West Virginia State three weeks ago.

On the other hand West Virginia defeated Pisk, conqueror of Wilberforce, but the Mountaineers have lost two games while Wilberforce has lost only one and tied one. The Thanksgiving Day game, then, finds these old rivals rather evenly matched and there will be no odds likely in the betting.

The contest will find two teams whose principal method of attack is the air. West Virginia boasts an aerial threat in the combination of Nash-Edwards-Meadows, for this trio has been known to break up more than one football game.

Wilberforce, on the other hand, has its Moore-Fowler, Moore-Thornhill, and Scurry-Terrell combinations. West Virginia, it is believed, will use more short and lateral passes than the Bulldogs.

In the kicking Moore and Scurry of Wilberforce will be pitted against Edwards, whose excellent booting has stood out in all the games played by West Virginia this season. Edwards, Meadows, Jones, an end, and Hunter, a tackle will be marked men on Turkey Day. The two teams are rather evenly matched in their lines and much of the out-come of this year's classic will rest with the ability of these men to hold in the trenches.

Wilberforce is planning a gala celebration, "Miss Wilberforce," in the person of Miss Clementine Richardson, will be the official hostess at all social functions and will present the ball to the captains of the teams just before the opening whistle. The University Band, under the direction of Prof. Howard Daniel, will be on parade in light new uniforms while gayly decorated cars will lend color to the celebration. Dormitory and school buildings have already been decorated with the colors of the two schools and a continuous round of social activities beginning at 8 a. m., Thursday with a welcoming reception in Beacom Gym and ending with a dance at the Armory in Xenia is planned.

Residents of the Wilberforce community and of Xenia will throw wide their homes for the entertainment of incoming guests. A special public address apparatus has been installed in the University Stadium to give a play by play description of the game to the crowd. General admission is $1.50 with reserved seats selling for $2.00.

Steno refuses to accept heart balm

CLEVELAND, Nov. 26.—The $40,000 heart balm won by Miss Elizabeth Kelley, 24-year-old stenographer, from Alexander C. Weizer, son-in-law of Theodor Kundtz, Cleveland millionaire, was to be "written off the books" in common pleas court today following the action of the typist's attorney in agreeing to forewear her right to collect the balm and dismiss her breach of promise action.

The agreement came in the midst of preparations being made by Joseph L. Stern, attorney for Weizer, to ask for a retrial of the case on charges of perjury of testimony in the first trial.

YOUTH DIES FROM ACCIDENTAL SHOT

DOVER, O., Nov. 26.—Shot-gun wounds, accidentally received last Saturday, today proved fatal to Harold Cromm, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Cromm, of Dennison.

The boy was fatally wounded while he was attempting to knock apples from a tree with the butt of his father's gun. The weapon was accidentally discharged, the bullet lodging in his right lung after it had shattered his shoulder.

Death was caused last night by pneumonia and hemorrhage of the lung.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Tuesday's final selling wave was extended into the first period of trading today and slightly lower prices were quoted for the industrial and utility favorites. The market developed into a typical pre-holiday affair before the end of the first hour, some stocks dropping from sheer neglect and others rallying on short covering by the professionals.

A further 2 per cent drop in steel production and a decrease in car loadings for the week was not unexpected.

FOOTBALL CAREERS
THURSDAY MORNINGSpringfield Tilt Is Last
Of Season For Central

Eight seniors on Xenia Central High's football team will don grid tugs for the last time Thursday morning when the Buccaneers gridders close their current season in the annual Thanksgiving Day contest with Springfield High at Cox Field. The kickoff will be at 10 o'clock.

Seniors who will play their last game are Sherman Huston, guard; Marvin Spahr, guard; Charles Adair, halfback; Robert Kinsey, tackle and fullback; Birch Bell, quarterback; Paul McClellan, center; Lester Price, end; and Charles Shoemaker, guard.

Those who are leaving will be difficult to replace. They have been a credit to the team and to the school. Bell has been one of the leading offensive threats for the Bucs for the last four years while Adair has seen active service for two seasons.

Huston, Spahr, Kinsey and McClellan—the four linemen—have been the bulwarks of the forward wall this season, sacrificing personal glory for teamwork. Spahr is closing his third season as a regular. This has been Huston's first season. Kinsey, converted from a tackle into a fullback in mid-season when Howard Thompson departed his shoulder in the Withrow game, has been a particularly handy boy to have around. McClellan has been the regular center most of the season, while Price developed surprisingly this fall into a fine punter.

Spahr, Price, Bell and Kinsey have played in every quarter of every game so far this season, an amazing record.

Then you must not overlook Charles Shoemaker, also a senior and a guard, who has been a member of the squad for the last three seasons although not earning a regular berth. He will probably see a good bit of action against the Wildcats as will all other seniors.

Regardless of the outcome of the Springfield tilt the Buccaneers squad this season has been a fine group to work with, Coach Wilson declares. Its fighting ability, most of the time against odds, has made it respected by all opponents and admired by all. Playing through a difficult schedule the Bucs have never let up. Their team spirit has been wonderful and they will strive to make a good showing in the season's finale Thursday morning.

Twenty-two Springfield players will also tread the gridiron for the last time Thanksgiving Day. Wildcat players who will make their final appearance include: Shingler, Moser, Neer, Corie, Campbell, Hall, Duffy, Alloway, Ferguson, Kramer, Gordon, Claus, Gering, Collins, Nisley, Priest, McConopus, Doughman, Kissell, Epprecht, Caywood and Pullen.

Springfield has won seven and lost two games to date. The Wildcats lost to Dayton Stivers, 8 to 0 and Middletown, 13 to 0, but have defeated Gallon, 14 to 0; Columbus, 14 to 0; Troy, 62 to 0; Aquinas, 14 to 7; Cincinnati Withrow, 27 to 0; Lima South, 19 to 0, and also Marion Harding by a huge count last Saturday.

Defeated only once this season—by Pisk University—Wilberforce has one of the best if not the best defensive records of any college team in the entire country—white or colored. The Wilberforce goal line has been crossed only twice.

Quarterback Thornhill ranks thirteenth among the high point scorers in Ohio college circles with forty-three points and Moore is also well up among the leaders.

The list of unbeaten and untied major college football teams has been reduced to four this season. Alabama, Utah, Washington State and Notre Dame remain in this select class, each having won eight straight games except Utah, which has seven consecutive victories to its credit. Southern California, which has amassed 350 points, is the high scoring team of the country. Only seven points have been scored against Marquette, which has by far the best defensive record.

GREENVILLE MEETS
SIDNEY IN CONTEST
THANKSGIVING DAYThird Place In Loop
Will Be Decided
Thursday

SIDNEY, O., Nov. 26.—Third place in the Miami Valley League this season will be at stake when Sidney High and Greenville High scrap it out Thanksgiving Day on the Greenville gridiron in the closing game of the season for both teams.

Greenville has played two 6 to 6 ties with Troy and Xenia, has lost to Piqua and Miamisburg and is the only league school which has not won a league game this season. The chief feather in its cap was in defeating Cincinnati Purcell early in the season.

Versailles held Greenville to two touchdowns while Sidney amassed four against Versailles.

GREENVILLE, O., Nov. 26.—Although Greenville High met its second league defeat at Miamisburg last Saturday by a 12 to 6 margin, the Big Green is hopeful of winning the annual Thanksgiving Day struggle with Sidney here Thursday.

Since there were only three days in which to practice for the Sidney game, the squad is being sent through short, snappy workouts this week. Making its last stand at Harmon Field, Greenville will seek to climax its season with a record of five victories, four losses and two ties.

Tuesday At Bowersville

The 1930-31 basketball season in Greene County Class B high school circles was ushered in Tuesday night when the boys' and girls' basketball teams of Jefferson Twp. and Ross Twp. divided a double-header on the Bowersville floor.

Ross Twp. boys, led by Swain, all-county center, who bagged six field goals and a foul, defeated Jefferson Twp. boys, 24 to 17, but Jefferson's feminine sextet nosed out Ross lassies, 22 to 21 in an exciting contest. In the first preliminary of the evening between the junior high teams of the two schools, Ross juniors won, 19 to 14.

In the boys' contest Hargrave, center, topped the Jefferson scoring with eight points. In the girls' game Hite tallied thirteen points for Jefferson, while Ford weighed in with ten for Ross. Line-ups:

LANGS OPEN SEASON
FRIDAY AT LEBANON

The Lang Chevrolet Co. semi-pro basketball team will open its court season Friday night this week at Lebanon, meeting the annually strong Harmon Hall quintet in a game scheduled to start at 8:15 o'clock.

The Lang courtiers have been practicing almost nightly for the last several weeks and are hopeful of getting off to a flying start.

The team has been weakened by the withdrawal of Sam Huston, forward, from the squad because of an old knee injury, but more recently was strengthened by the acquisition of Marion Putnam, brother of Roland Putnam, present player on the team. The Putnam brothers played on a semi-pro team at Detroit, Mich., last season while Marion, a guard, is a former Wittenberg College star of two seasons ago.

ROAN POST COURT
TEAM MAKES DEBUT

The re-organized John Roan Post, colored American Legion basketball team, with a galaxy of prominent court performers included on its roster, will make its local debut Friday night, December 5 at the National Guard armory here, meeting the Y. M. C. A. "Big Five" quintet of Dayton. A preliminary will start at 7:30 o'clock and the evening will be climaxed with a dance.

Joe Anderson, "Rock" Anderson, Wu Pang Ward, Buford "Budd" Moore, Ed Ritchie and others will play with the Legion team during the coming season.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET
NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Tuesday's final selling wave was extended into the first period of trading today and slightly lower prices were quoted for the industrial and utility favorites. The market developed into a typical pre-holiday affair before the end of the first hour, some stocks dropping from sheer neglect and others rallying on short covering by the professionals.

A further 2 per cent drop in steel production and a decrease in car loadings for the week was not unexpected.

JORETTA

A LOVE STORY

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "DAD'S GIRL" Etc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Joretta Dowling is the only daughter of a wealthy merchant of the west, yet capable, poised and sensible. She has just made her debut and become engaged to Norman Williams, a wealthy shipbuilder, because her socially ambitious mother has persuaded her that it is the best thing to do. Her vain, pompous and adventurous father has just bought a new yacht, which she meets Jim Norton, the engineer, and is attracted to him at once. On the way home that night Norman wants her to elope, and is angered at her refusal, but apologizes the next morning and meets her for lunch. Dowling sends for Jim. They arrange to make weekly trips, obviously for fishing and pleasure, but with a secret destination. At luncheon Norman urges Joretta to marry him soon. Her mother plans to have the wedding in October, which Joretta thinks is too soon. But Norman is jubilant over the plans. Meanwhile her father anchors his boat at a southern port and disappears ashore, ordering the crew to stay aboard until his return.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Where's dad?" Joretta asked her mother the next morning. It was not uncommon for any of the Dowlings to be absent for several days as they went about their separate ways, but each always was interested in the others' whereabouts. For her father to be gone and not let her know just where he was going and why, was new to Joretta.

"Oh, he took the yacht and went away for several days—a good trial cruise, he said. I suppose that boat will take him away from us as nothing has ever done before. He's all wrapped up in it now. Perhaps it will wear off. He says I've had you to think about and plan for all these years and he's had nothing but business. I suppose that's why he hasn't been able to absorb his time these days."

"You should go with him all you can, mother. It would be good for you to relax and live on the water a great deal."

"Yes, I like it well enough for a few days—but it's too lazy a life for me. Besides, dad didn't even ask me to go this trip," she recalled with amusement. "Just a stag crew, he said. And he didn't take all of them either. Four men in a boat."

"He will be back to take us all on Saturday, won't he? I asked Norman and Sally and Jack, Jane and Kirk, Helen and that New York fellow, La Cossit. Did you know, mother, that he's done two successful musical comedies and is out here getting atmosphere for an Indian play? My! I should think it would be marvelous to have something really to do—something that counted toward making the world a better or happier place to live in!" Her eyes glowed and grew dreamy. "You know, mumsy, I believe if I'd been a poor girl, I might have amounted to something. I'd like to work, even—oh, even at something quite grubby and tiresome at first—just for the fun of having a chance to improve and do something better."

Her mother regarded her with astonishment. Was it possible that after all she had done for Joretta, the girl didn't appreciate her inimitable and enviable position?

"Don't let some romantic notion convince you that that kind of thing is at all as attractive as it sounds. The trouble is, after persons have struggled to success, they look down from the heights to which they have attained and see the whole perspective with the rose-colored glasses which they have acquired. Seen from a distance, the anguish and heartbreak and utter drudgery are minimized. And the few pleasant incidents are romanticized."

"Isn't that the way with everything, mother? Even love. There is so much said and written and sung about love—and after all—the romance is chiefly in the rose-colored imaginations of the romanticists. I'm not awfully keen about love," pensively.

Mrs. Dowling looked at Joretta thoughtfully. She had just returned from her ride with Norman and was curled up on the divan in the solarium, where the sun sifted down through the glass-domed ceiling and athred her in a golden radiance. It gleamed on her head and her shiny leather boots.

What strange moods this daughter of hers had exhibited in the last few days. Was it possible that with every attribute for a perfect and soul-sweeping romance, she failed to respond to its completeness? Or was her youth and inexperience and temerity that bewildered her? She floundered for reassuring words. "You can't expect everything to come at once, dear. The most beautiful romances, like the roses, unfold gradually, becoming fuller and sweeter and more gratifying as they grow."

"That's a nice thought. You know, mother, I believe that if Norman and I had some definite objective on which to work together, if we had to dare life with a challenge and struggle to win, I believe we should find greater happiness. Really, I envy you and dad the experience you had. Now that, I'd call living and romance."

"As I told you, don't let sentiment and imagination carry you off your feet. I know how you feel now, but remember, I've been over all that. It has its compensations and rewards as everything does, but there is enough grief and tragedy to balance."

"But isn't that life, after all, with its balance of emotion? It must be that if we don't have our tragedies one way, we get them in another."

"Perhaps we do. But you must remember, too, that Norman isn't the kind of a man to face hardship. He's a born gentleman of leisure, and probably never would accomplish what his father has, alone."

"That's just it, mother. Norman is not ambitious and self-sufficient, as I'd like him to be."

"He doesn't need to be. He fills his place in life, and it takes all kinds of people to make the world. Another thing, your marriage to him will make a very nice balance, just because you are so independent and capable, yourself. Together, you will make another unit in the scheme of existence."

"How perfectly beautiful you make it sound, mother. Fulfilling our destiny," Joretta stood up and made a graceful gesture of submission, so slim and lissom and glowing. "Norman is coming to tea. May we have it in the garden? Some of the others may drop in. Mr. La Cossit is playing tennis with Helen. That's the one thing they have in common. They're playing at the club but said they would rather come here for tea with us."

So the days and nights passed for those who sing a swan song to dull care—halecyon days; happy, joyous, carefree. All color and laughter and languorous ease.

Allan Dowling returned from his three-day cruise with a new light in his eye and a buoyancy in his step that pleased his wife, who conceded that the buying of the Montezuma was one of the best investments he had ever made. She could see that it was an investment in his health and well-being.

"Let us hope so," he nodded absently, his thoughts far away. And in the months that followed, he seemed to grow more and more apart from them, to live in a world of his own. His absences from home became more frequent and for longer periods of time, but he seemed so absorbed and busy and reticent that his wife dismissed from her thoughts any misgivings which might have assailed her.

She, too, was absorbed and busy, with plans for Joretta's approaching marriage, in the selection of her trousseau and linens, their making and the thousand and one little things that are essential to an elaborate wedding and a perfect honeymoon.

There were fifteen who boarded the Montezuma for the week-end cruise up the coast, a strip of sparkling blue water separating them from the distant range of mountains that loomed like a wall reaching to the sky from north to south. Constant changes of color and light, as daylight faded into sunset, brief twilight and darkness, and the star-spangled night-blue of the sky closed down over their limited world that the expanse of the sea made only a part of a universe that was void about them.

Few were the hours when there was no activity on that floating world. It was early dawn before the exuberance of the eight young people waned, and soon thereafter one or more of the seven bridge-playing, steamer chair-napping elders were seen pacing the deck with brisk purposefulness.

But even dancing and shuffleboard and bridge can become monotonous on a yacht, and Joretta had done a clever thing when she included La Cossit in the party. He was a welcome diversion. He talked of the labor and genius of the make-believe which serves to entertain audiences for a few brief hours; of scores, lines, backdrops, rehearsals, understatements—all in the jargon of the stage. He did a credible lone act himself in impersonation. He was clever and fascinating. Like most geniuses, his appearance was odd, but his personality captivated his audience, whether it was one or more.

In the back, his head tapered up from a broad, somewhat thick neck, with a pronounced slant to the crown. His straight, black hair was long, and swept from a high, broad forehead with gleaming immaculateness to the nape of his neck. From the crown down, it reminded you of a child's sliding chute—so sleek and straight at a precipitous angle.

But his quick eyes smiled readily and his long, sensitive hands responded instantly to anyone's need for service. He sang as did McCormick, told new jokes in a delightful George Jessel monologue and danced like Valentino. In a word, he made the party.

To make it particularly annoying for Joretta, Norman had abstained all week to such an extent that the rebound left him stretched flat on his back in his cabin by midnight. She knew why Jack and Kirk and Vernon La Cossit insisted upon dancing every third round with her and the girls sweetly avoided any references to Norman. There was no particular disgrace to Norman's passing out of the picture. Somebody always did, often most of them. But just at this particular time, in a select group, to leave her conspicuously deserted—irritated her.

KIWANIANS VISIT

SCIENCE BUILDING

Experiencing something different in the place of the regular club meeting, members of the Xenia Kiwanis Club were conducted on a tour of Science Hall, Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Tuesday evening. The tour had been planned by Dr. Austin M. Patterson, vice president of Antioch, and chairman of the entertainment committee for Tuesday evening's meeting.

Dr. C. F. Adams, head of the chemistry department conducted the tour and interestingly explained all details of the building to Kiwanians. He also explained the research work that is being carried out at Antioch this year. An interesting feature of the science building was the library, where Dr. Patterson has been instrumental in placing a large number of books.

Preceding their visit to the science building thirty club members enjoyed dinner at the Antioch Tea Room.

JORETTA A LOVE STORY By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER Author of 'DAD'S GIRL' Etc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Joretta Dowling is the only daughter of a wealthy merchant of the west, yet capable, poised and sensible. She has just made her debut and become engaged to Norman Williams, a wealthy shipbuilder, because her socially ambitious mother has persuaded her that it is the best thing to do. Her vain, pompous and adventurous father has just bought a new yacht, which she christens at a party. She meets Jim Norton, the engineer, and is attracted to him at once. On the way home that night Norman wants her to elope, and she is angered at his refusal, but apologizes the next morning and meets her for lunch. Dowling sends for Jim. They arrange to make weekly trips, obviously for fishing and pleasure, but with a secret destination. At luncheon Norman urges Joretta to marry him soon. Her mother plans to have the wedding in October, which Joretta thinks is too soon. But Norman is jubilant over the plans. Meanwhile her father anchors his boat at a so-called port and disappears ashore, ordering the crew to stay aboard until his return.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER 10

"Where's dad?" Joretta asked her mother the next morning. It was not uncommon for any of the Dowlings to be absent for several days as they went about their separate ways, but each always was interested in the others' whereabouts. For her father to be gone and not let her know just where he was going and why, was new to Joretta.

"Oh, he took the yacht and went away for several days—a good trial cruise, he said. I suppose that boat will take him away from us as nothing has ever done before. He's all wrapped up in it now. Perhaps it will wear off. He says he had you to think about and plan for all these years and he's had nothing but business. I suppose that's true—he hasn't much to absorb his time these days."

"You should go with him all you can, mother. It would be good for you to relax and live on the water a great deal."

"Yes, I like it well enough for a few days—but it's too lazy a life for me. Besides, dad didn't even ask me to go this trip," she recalled with amusement. "Just a stag crew, he said. And he didn't take all of them either. Four men in a boat."

"He will be back to take us all on Saturday, won't he? I asked Norman and Sally and Jack, Jane and Kirk, Helen and that New York fellow, La Cosset. Did you know, mother, that he's done two successful musical comedies and is out here getting atmosphere for an Indian play? My! I should think it would be marvelous to have something really to do—something that counted toward making the world a better or happier place to live in!" Her eyes glistened and grew dreamy. "You know, mummy, I believe I'd been a poor girl. I might have amounted to something. I'd like to work, even—oh, even at something quite grubby and tiresome at first, just for the fun of having a chance to improve and do something better."

Her mother regarded her with astonishment. Was it possible that after all she had done for Joretta, the girl didn't appreciate her inimitable and enviable position? "Don't let some romantic notion convince you that that kind of thing is at all as attractive as it sounds. The trouble is, after persons have struggled to success, they look down from the heights to which they have attained and see the whole perspective with the rose-colored glasses which they have acquired. Seen from a distance, the anguish and heartbreak and utter drudgery are minimized. And the few pleasant incidents are romanticized."

"Isn't that the way with everything, mother? Even love. There is so much said and written and sung about love that after all—the romance is chiefly in the rose-colored imaginations of the romanticists. I'm not awfully keen about love," pensively.

Mrs. Dowling looked at Joretta thoughtfully. She had just returned from her ride with Norman and was curled up on the divan in the solarium, where the sun sifted down through the glass-domed ceiling and abated her in a golden radiance. It gleamed on her head and her shiny leather boots. What strange moods this daughter of hers had exhibited in the last few days. Was it possible that with every attribute for a perfect and soul-sweeping romance, she failed to respond to its completeness? Or was her youth and inexperience and timidity that bewildered her? She floundered for reassuring words. "You can't expect everything to come at once, dear. The most beautiful romances, like the roses, unfold gradually, becoming fuller and sweeter and more gratifying as they grow."

"That's a nice thought. You know, mother, I believe that if Norman and I had some definite objective on which to work together, if we had to dare life with a challenge and struggle to win, I believe we should find greater happiness. Really, I envy you and dad the experience you had. Now that I'd call living and romance."

"As I told you, don't let sentiment and imagination carry you off your feet. I know how you feel now, but remember, I've been over all that. It has its compensations and rewards as everything does, but there is enough grief and tragedy to balance it."

"But isn't that life, after all, with its balance of emotion? It must be that if we don't have our tragedies one way, we get them in another."

"Perhaps we do. But you must remember, too, that Norman isn't the kind of a man to, face hardship. He's a born gentleman on leisure, and probably never would accomplish what his father has, alone."

"That's just it, mother. Norman is not ambitious and self-sufficient. As I'd like him to be."

"He doesn't need to be. He fills his place in life, and it takes all kinds of people to make the world. Another thing, your marriage to him will make a very nice balance, just because you are so independent and capable, yourself. Together, you will make another unit in the scheme of existence."

"How perfectly beautiful you make it sound, mother. Fulfilling our destiny," Joretta stood up and made a graceful gesture of submission, so slim and lissom and glowing. "Norman is coming to tea. May we have it in the garden? Some of the others may drop in. Mr. La Cosset is playing tennis with Helen. That's the one thing they have in common. They're playing at the club but said they would rather come here for tea with us."

But even dancing and shuffleboard and bridge can become monotonous on a yacht, and Joretta had done a clever thing when she included La Cosset in the party. He was a welcome diversion. He talked of the labor and genius of the make-believe which serves to entertain audiences for a few brief hours; of scores, lines, backdrops, rehearsals, understudies—all in the jargon of the stage. He did a credible lone act himself in impersonation. He was clever and fascinating. Like most geniuses, his appearance was odd, but his personality captivated his audience, whether it was one or more.

In the back, his head tapered up from a broad, somewhat thick neck, with a pronounced slant to the crown. His straight, black hair was long and swept from a high, broad forehead with gleaming immaculateness to the nape of his neck. From the crown down, it reminded you of a child's sliding chute—so sleek and straight at a precipitous angle.

But his quick eyes smiled readily and his long, sensitive hands responded instantly to anyone's need for service. He sang as did McCormick, told new jokes in a delightful George Jessel monologue and danced like Valentino. In a word, he made the party.

To make it particularly annoying for Joretta, Norman had abstained all week to such an extent that the rebound left him stretched flat on his back in his cabin by midnight. She knew why Jack and Kirk and Vernon La Cosset insisted upon dancing every third round with her and the girls sweetly avoided any references to Norman. There was no particular disgrace to Norman's passing out of the picture. Someone always did, often most of them. But just at this particular time, in a select group, to leave her conspicuously deserted—irritated her.

The star evidently has an elastic heart also, because it bounced back from Clara Bow to Lina Basquette without suffering any damage.

The red-head and Harry apparently had things all set for a nuptial stunt, but couldn't seem to get together for the actual matrimony. Then Clara got her name in the papers in connection with a Texas doctor with whom she was having an alleged amorous affair, but Harry even excused this if a long-distance telephone call from Texas to New York was reported accurately in the daily press. Now then comes the word of a new engagement. Lina was only recently divorced.

A clause in the will of the late Rudolph Valentino, that any beneficiary contesting the document would be cut off with $1, may mean that his brother, Albert Guglielmi will receive only this amount.

So says S. George Ullman, executor of the estate, who has been charged with mismanagement by Albert Ullmann has contended that the estate was bankrupt when Valentino died but was salvaged

Lewis Stone, debunking acting, has this to say: "Any person with intelligence, natural aptitude, and the capacity for hard work, can become a competent actor. You don't need to feel the roles you play. It is better, as a matter of fact, if you don't. How absurd to suppose that you can do a drunk scene when you have had ten highballs."

Did you know that Reginald Denny came to Hollywood to go into pictures because he temporarily lost his voice while singing in a comic opera in Calcutta, India.

WOMAN BRINGS SUIT FOR DIVORCE HERE; OTHER COURT NEWS

Because she understands that her husband, who deserted her eleven years ago, is about to come into an inheritance of $4,000 as an heir of the late Erhard Buerger, Anna Buerger, Valley Pike, near Dayton, has brought suit in Common Pleas Court against Florian Buerger, Detroit, Mich., seeking a divorce and alimony on grounds of willful absence from home for more than three years.

The plaintiff was granted a temporary restraining order, enjoining John Reger, Dayton, as administrator of the estate of Erhard Buerger, deceased, from disposing of her husband's interest in the estate.

The couple was married at Newport, Ky., August 16, 1913. Three children, Roberta, 15, Robert, 14 and Margaret, 12, were born of the union. The plaintiff claims her husband, a tool and dye worker, deserted his family July 15, 1919. She asks to be decreed custody of the children and seeks an allowance for their support.

Divorce, on grounds of extreme cruelty, is sought in a suit filed by Pauline Fox, through her mother and next friend, Viola Hill, against Lawrence Fox, 700 E. Third St., Xenia. The plaintiff, who is under 21 years of age, married the defendant at Greenup, Ky., August 26, 1930. Her husband, a tool and dye worker, beats and pinches her, refuses to work at his trade and drinks rub alcohol, hair tonic and cannot heat, the wife complains. She asks temporary and permanent alimony, attorney fees and an injunction preventing her husband from molesting her.

Charging his wife refuses to live with him, Hamme Fleenor has brought suit for divorce from Lura Fleenor on grounds of gross neglect of duty. They were married July 10, 1930.

FORGED SIGNATURE CLAIMED

TEMPORARY ALIMONY

SALE AUTHORIZED

Much has been said during the last week about new books for children. It is true that there have been an unusual number of lovely books for younger people but it is equally true that the fall has seen the publication of an unusual number of vital books for the mature reader.

Almost every well known author seems to have had a new book for publication this fall—Galsworthy, Wharton, Ostenson, Locke, E. H. Young, Edmonds, Helen Martin, Sedgewick, Joseph Lincoln, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Priestley, Feuchtwanger, Unset—it sounds like a list of the most popular novelists of the day. And so it is, and everyone of those mentioned has just recently given us a new novel. Furthermore almost without exception their newest book is unusually interesting.

These are only a few of the authors whose new titles are to be found at the County Library. The interesting non-fiction titles include many new books of biography and travel as well as books of a more technical nature. The new science series published by the Smithsonian Institute is now ready for circulation.

"Arvo Excellent for Kidney and Bladder Troubles"

Arvo is fast becoming the most popular tonic in Xenia... and on merit alone. Arvo actually helps men and women to regain and retain their health. How else can you explain the large number of bottles of Arvo that have been sold in this community? Arvo has made good with the people of Xenia and that is why it is selling in ever-increasing quantities. Mr. Dowdell's experience with Arvo is typical. Here it is:

"When a fellow works hard all day in a factory as I have done, he appreciates a good night's rest. If that is denied him, through bad health or other annoyances, it is bound to tell on him sooner or later. I was troubled with frequent night calls, and that naturally interfered with my rest. I became irritable and nervous, and I don't know what might have happened to me if some good friend hadn't happened to recommend Arvo to me. I felt better from the first bottle, and now I feel like a man made over again. I'm 62 years young and I just full of pep." B. F. Dowdell, 74 South Terry Street, Dayton, Ohio.

Why not try a bottle of Arvo yourself? It's good for both young and old.

THE SURE-FIRE WINTER GASOLINE

KOOLMOTOR

is free from the harmful GUM that prevents quick starting

KOOLMOTOR—the original high test, anti-knock green gasoline—gives its users three-way protection against hard starting in cold weather.

First, it vaporizes quickly.

Second, it ignites promptly.

Third, it's free from the harmful gum that sticks your valves. Sticky, gummy valves do not function freely—your engine acts sluggish—delayed starting is the result.

This winter when you think of quick starting, think of KOOLMOTOR—the sure-fire winter gasoline—the gasoline that gives quick starting plus—plus the same pick-up, power, and anti-knock performance you expect of your engine on a bright, warm, summer day.

WOMAN BRINGS SUIT FOR DIVORCE HERE; OTHER COURT NEWS

Because she understands that her husband, who deserted her eleven years ago, is about to come into an inheritance of $4,000 as a heir of the late Erhard Buerger, Anna Buerger, Valley Pike, near Dayton, has brought suit in Common Pleas Court against Florian Buerger, Detroit, Mich., seeking a divorce and alimony on grounds of wilful absence from home for more than three years.

The plaintiff was granted a temporary restraining order, enjoining John Reger, Dayton, as administrator of the estate of Erhard Buerger, deceased, from disposing of her husband's interest in the estate.

The couple was married at Newport, Ky., August 16, 1913. Three children, Roberta, 15, Robert, 14 and Margaret, 12, were born of the union. The plaintiff claims her husband, a tool and dye worker, deserted his family July 15, 1919. She asks to be decreed custody of the children and seeks an allowance for their support.

Divorce, on grounds of extreme cruelty, is sought in a suit filed by Pauline Fox, through her mother and next friend, Viola Hill, against Lawrence Fox, 700 E. Third St., Xenia. The plaintiff, who is under 21 years of age, married the defendant at Greenup, Ky., August 26, 1930. Her husband, a tool and dye worker, beats and pinches her, refuses to work at his trade and drinks rub alcohol, hair tonic and cannot heat, the wife complains.

She asks temporary and permanent alimony, attorney fees and an injunction preventing her husband from molesting her.

Charging his wife refuses to live with him, Hamme Fleenor has brought suit for divorce from Lura Fleenor on grounds of gross neglect of duty. They were married July 10, 1930.

Attorneys Davis Harrison and H. D. Smith represent the plaintiff.

FORGED SIGNATURE CLAIMED

Declaring that his signature to a cognovit note on which the defendant recovered a judgment for $24.65 last November 12 was obtained without his knowledge, was unauthorized and was a forgery, James Lewis has filed suit in Common Pleas Court against Cordy Williams, seeking to have the judgment vacated. Marcus Shoup is the plaintiff's attorney.

SEEKS INJUNCTION

An injunction suit has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Gertrude Swadener Gnaven against John Pramer and Louisa Pramer through Attorney Marcus Shoup.

WINS JUDGMENT

The Greene County Lumber Co. has recovered a judgment for $142.87 in Common Pleas Court against Gilbert H. Jones and others, the amount being due on an account for materials furnished and labor performed.

TEMPORARY ALIMONY

In the case of Annabelle Fair against Clifton Fair in Common Pleas Court, the plaintiff has been granted temporary custody of their minor children and temporary alimony for their support.

SALE AUTHORIZED

Because neither of the parties concerned elected to take the property involved at its appraised value, Sheriff Oliver Tate has been directed by Common Pleas Court to advertise and sell the premises in the case of Dora Mowen against A. R. Jones and others.

RULING UPHELD

Decision of Municipal Court has been affirmed by Common Pleas Court in the case of H. E. Eichman against Lawrence Luttrell, the judgment having been appealed by the defendant on a motion to discharge an attachment. The appeal was dismissed.

LIBRARY NOTES

Much has been said during the last week about new books for children. It is true that there have been an unusual number of lovely books for younger people but it is equally true that the fall has seen the publication of an unusual number of vital books for the mature reader.

Almost every well known author seems to have had a new book for publication this fall—Galsworthy, Wharton, Oates, Locke, E. H. Young, Edmonds, Helen Martin, Sedgewick, Joseph Lincoln, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Priestley, Feuchwanger, Unset—it sounds like a list of the most popular novelists of the day. And so it is, and everyone of those mentioned has just recently given us a new novel. Furthermore almost without exception their newest book is unusually interesting.

These are only a few of the authors whose new titles are to be found at the County Library. The interesting non-fiction titles include many new books of biography and travel as well as books of a more technical nature. The new science series published by the Smithsonian Institute is now ready for circulation.

"Arvo Excellent for Kidney and Bladder Troubles"

Arvo is fast becoming the most popular tonic in Xenia and on merit alone. Arvo actually helps men and women to regain and retain their health. How else can you explain the large number of bottles of Arvo that have been sold in this community? Arvo has made good with the people of Xenia and that is why it is selling in ever-increasing quantities. Mr. Dowdell's experience with Arvo is typical. Here it is:

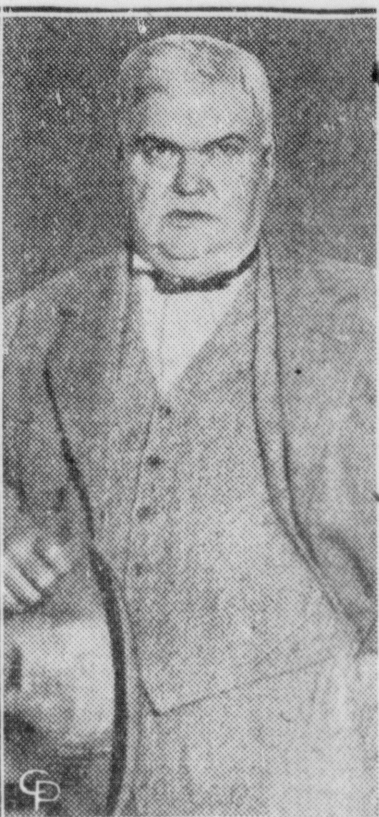

"When a fellow works hard all day in a factory as I have done, he appreciates a good night's rest. If that is denied him, through bad health or other annoyances, it is bound to tell on him sooner or later. I was troubled with frequent night calls, and that naturally interfered with my rest. I became irritable and nervous, and I don't know what might have happened to me if some good friend hadn't happened to recommend Arvo to me. I felt better from the first bottle, and now I feel like a man made over again. I'm 62 years young and just full of pep." B. F. Dowdell, 74 South Terry Street, Dayton, Ohio.

Why not try a bottle of Arvo yourself? It's good for both young and old.
